PRELIMINARY VOTE FAVORS GERMANY

SAARBRECKEN, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Preliminary voting in the Saar plebiscite started today, disclosing an overwhelming majority among the first voters in favor of returning the territory to Germany.

The plebiscite proper does not occur until next Sunday, but civil servants, railway and postal workers, police and other essential workers who will be too busy to vote on Sunday, started balloting today.

The ballot was in secret, but by canvassing the voters, the United Press was able to ascertain the trend. The preliminary voting will continue tomorrow and Wednesday.

A feeling of tension ushered in the final week of 15 years of post-war dispute over whether the valuable mining region shall belong to France or Germany or remain under control of the league of nations.

Both the German front, favoring return to Germany, and the status quo group favoring the league of nations, held impressive demonstrations yesterday. The German front display was by far the more impressive. In a blinding snowstorm, 250,000 Saarlanders marched from all parts of the territory to attend the great demonstration at Saint Arnaud.

The demonstrators were accompanied by disorder and shootings, emphasizing the heated passions of the inhabitants. Police quelled frequent street fights when Nazis tried to break through the line of march as 90,000 anti-Nazi demonstrators paraded the streets after their meeting. Women with babies in their arms and war veterans on crutches joined the brawling.

Police at Homburg tried to arrest a Nazi disturber, who escaped after firing four shots. Several bombs were exploded at Saarbrücken without serious damage. Demonstrators at Saarbrücken fired revolver shots in the air during their march to the railroad station after the mass meeting, but police quickly quelled them.

On the whole, however, the demonstrations were carried out with amazing lack of violence, in view of the tension. Heavy forces of Saar police were able to cope with the marchers and the international army, held in reserve, was not called upon.
