MINING ACTIVE

NOW IN BOHEMIA SAYS JENNINGS

The Bohemia mines are very active now, reports George H. Jennings, who has returned from the week-end there and to announce that the Lead Crystal mine has made a "strike."

Workers in the Lead Crystal mine are operating in the face of a 1000-foot tunnel, far in the mountain, not bothered by cold and snow storms outside. Here some 20 gold-pan samples were taken from a five-foot face of ore and all showed free gold in the pan. "The boys are much excited and expect to get much better ore just ahead," Mr. Jennings said.

Reports were given on other mining operations in the vicinity by Mr. Jennings. The Helena mine with Dale Wryot in charge, 800 feet of the lower main tunnel, has been cleared and retimbered and a four-foot face of high grade shipping ore opened up. The Helena is well equipped for some extensive development work this winter, having put up a new bunkhouse with hot and cold water and baths, and all their winter supplies in. They are also equipped with a compressor and air drills for tunnel work. Six carloads of ore were shipped from the Helena to the U. S. Smelting company at Salt Lake City, which netted them several thousand dollars. About a mile further southeast in Horseheaven Basin is the old Noonday mine, which is being operated by the Grouse Mountain Mining company, with headquarters in Eugene. Kenneth Watkins is in charge. This company has been very active this fall, having installed very large new living quarters, ore bins, mill building and snowsheds.

All this material has been hauled in over the new road constructed last summer by government 3-C and forestry crews. The road is now being kept open with a two and one-half ton truck and 20 horsepower caterpillar tractor.

At the Evening Star mine located in Champion Saddle between Grouse and Fairview mountains, the mill is idle this winter through the absence of Fred Bartel, the owner and operator, who is in Portland on a deal for the sale of the Champion mine, which at one time was the largest and most productive one of the Bohemia mines.

A mile northwest of the Evening Star is the Champion Extension, owned and operated by F. S. Day of Los Angeles. Here, high in the deep snow-covered bluff and just below the Fairview, U. S. forestry lookout station, two men are battling the winter snow and cold — looks more like Admiral Bird's "Little America" than a mine, Mr. Jennings said.

At the Lead Crystal mine to the west of all the other mines, winter operations are progressing with Wallace Jennings in charge. Deeper down in Champion canyon and almost out of the snow, Mr. Jennings was the honored guest of William J. James, better known in Eugene as "Bill." Here I found some hard working and very industrious miners, working with hand steel and hammer driving two tunnels, one to the east and one to the west side of the deep Champion canyon. The miners were working in 20 feet of quartz and iron impregnated with lead, zinc and copper. From a recent sample sent away for assay showed returns of 30 ounces silver to the ton. "The boys say that if the grub and supplies hold out to spring Bohemia will have a brand new silver mine," Mr. Jennings said.

Mr. Jennings, past president of the mining congress, reminds mining people that if they are interested in seeing the mines get government aid money they should attend the mining congress meeting in the Salem chamber of commerce, Jan. 16.

An overheated engine often results from carbon in the cylinders, which causes pre-ignition and interferes with proper cooling.
