

ENGLISH ADOPTION OF MOTHER CHURCH POPE PIUS' PLEA

VATICAN CITY, May 21.—(Special)—Roman Catholic churchmen awaited today British reaction to a plea to members of the Church of England to return to the Mother church.

Pope Pius made the plea yesterday at a service in which the Blessed Thomas More and John Fisher, first made saints of the church—the very Englishmen to be honored since the reformation.

The pope's plea to England was: "Let those who are still separated from us consider attentively the ancient glories of their church, which are both a reflection and an increment of the glories of the church of Rome."

"Let them consider and remember that this Apostolic See has been waiting for them so long and so anxiously not as coming from a strange dwelling place but as finally returning to their paternal home."

Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor of England, and Cardinal Fisher were beheaded in 1535 because they would not recognize Henry VIII as supreme earthly head of the Church of England.

They were beheaded by Pope Leo XIII in 1870.

The service at which they were made saints yesterday was one marked by the presence of the times in which they sacrificed their lives.

Christian Science Studies Mortality

"Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 19.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God of my salvation; in thee do I wait all the day" (Ps. 25:5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following correlative passage from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Mortals must gravitate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual,—they must near the broader interpretation of being, and gain some proper sense of the infinite,—in order that sin and mortality may be put off. This scientific sense of being, forsaking matter for Spirit, by no means suggests man's absorption into deity and the loss of his identity, but carries upon man enlarged individuality, a wider sphere of thought and action, a more expansive love, a higher and more permanent grace" (p. 295).

Coronation in Building

The housing canvass recently completed at Grants Pass has been productive of so much building activity that virtually all the local building tradesmen are finding their time fully occupied, according to Frank H. Trol, chairman of Josephine county housing committee, who was in Portland recently to attend the better selling convention.

"I do not intend to convey the impression that we have a shortage of workers in our area," Trol explained, "but it is a fact we have developed enough modernization and new home construction to keep our resident tradesmen busy, and the outlook for the remainder of the year is very bright indeed. The FHA program, I am convinced, has had a great deal to do with bringing about this favorable situation in Josephine county."

Local Odd Fellows At Grand Lodge

Many Eugene Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are attending the grand lodge session which began at Salem Sunday and will end Thursday night. The official representatives of the Odd Fellows here are G. A. Some plan to stay throughout the sessions while others are driving down for a day at a time. Salem is reported to be full of three-linkers and the Rebekahs.

AIRPLANE CHEATS SKYSCRAPERS WHILE PASSENGERS CHAT

NEW YORK, May 21.—(Special)—The motor of an airplane stalled 2,000 feet above the thick forest of skyscrapers of midtown Manhattan. Directly below, less than 800 feet away, was the spire of the world's highest building, the Empire State. Pilot Mitchell Stuppell, responsible for his own life and those of three passengers, realized he couldn't make a forced landing among skyscrapers.

"I tell you they're making wonderful planes these days," said a passenger. "They're so quiet. Why, it's hard to realize the motor is running." Stuppell could see the prop, turning over without force only by momentum. The motor was dead. Out of the corner of his eye, he saw the tops of the skyscrapers coming closer and closer. But since he didn't want to risk the danger of panic, he agreed affably that modern airplanes were indeed silent and launched into a discourse on the marvels of aviation to keep his passengers from looking out the cabin windows.

Meanwhile he had set his rudder for the longest possible glide, thinking of a vacant lot he knew in Brooklyn. He reached the East River with 1,000 feet elevation. On the other shore Brooklyn began, and another continuous patchwork of brick and steel. The plane now was two-thirds across the river, with an elevation of 800 feet. A quarter of a mile ahead was a series of tall buildings he couldn't possibly clear.

Desperately Stuppell talked. He told anecdotes of his student days. He told them about his wife, his children. Anything to keep their eyes away from the windows. Suddenly he shouted: "Hang on tight."

The passengers looked out. The river, now 10 feet below, was rising toward them. Stuppell pulled the plane's nose up, and its tail dragged in the water checking momentum. Suddenly the machine plunged into the water with a terrific splash. "All right," said Stuppell. "Let's crawl out on the wings or we'll get our feet wet."

The plane and passengers were towed ashore by a police launch.

Forest Bill Gets Favorable Report

Favorable report on the bill extending the boundaries of the Willamette forest to include several hundred acres in the Blue River area has been made by the public lands committee in congress, according to word received here Monday from Congressman James W. Mott.

The bill was introduced by Mott who informed the Eugene chamber of commerce that he planned to do everything in his power to obtain favorable action on the bill in congress.

Extension of the boundaries to include considerable timber in the vicinity of Blue River is desired in order to round out the present boundaries of the national forest area and to place this valuable timber under fire protection, it was said.

Typewriter Racket Warning Is Sounded

A warning that two men, purporting to be adding machine and typewriter repairmen who picked up machines and then left town, were being headed toward Eugene was received Monday by the Eugene chamber of commerce. The warning came from the Baker chamber where the pair operated recently.

According to the word from Baker, the men represented themselves as expert repairmen for these machines. They insist on taking the machines to their "shop" for repairs and after obtaining several machines, leave town.

JAIL SITUATION STILL UNSETTLED

With workmen starting work making temporary repairs of the old jail Monday, the question of whether or not the city could use the old building as a temporary jail, was uncertain with Eugene hospital officials firm in their intention to block such a move if possible.

Marylin Warlick, manager of the hospital, said Dr. Frederick Stricker, state health officer, would be in Eugene Tuesday morning to inspect the jail from the standpoint of sanitation, in the event his inspection should result in the condemnation of the jail, hospital authorities indicated they might not file an injunction seeking to restrain the city from making their repairs.

An injunction will be sought, however, if hospital authorities feel it necessary to stop the city from using this jail to house over-night prisoners, Warlick said.

Meanwhile, city officials declared Monday they were preparing plans to submit the project of building a new city jail as an SEIRA project. Plans have been drawn for remodeling the old boiler room in the basement of the city hall, making space for three cell blocks and police headquarters facing on West Eleventh street.

Estimated cost of this remodeling, including cement cell blocks as a fire proof jail, is about $4,000, according to William Clubb, city engineer. The question of remodeling the basement for the jail, however, hinges on the legality of installing the jail in a building which is not absolutely fire proof, it was pointed out.

Councilman Urges Bigger Bear Cage

Enlargement of the bear cage in Skinner butte park was recommended Monday by Fred Carlson, council member of the city park board, who said the present cage was inadequate for the four bears now owned by the city.

Councilman Carlson declared the present concrete and wire enclosure should be doubled in size to give the four bears adequate room during the hot summer months. The city started with two bears and two cubs were born last year.

Northwest Booster Campaign Started

Eugene and Lane county residents were invited to participate in a movement to boost the status of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, being sponsored by the Oregon State Motor Association and the Portland Oregon through the Eugene chamber of commerce.

The movement is to consist of articles, not to exceed 200 words, titled "Let's Boost a Bit." H. E. Clubb, chamber secretary, said, "The articles are to describe some fact in which either one of the states, or all three, display world leadership. Articles might be written on the subject of Oregon having the largest stand of timber in the world."

Articles accepted for publication in the Sunday Oregonian will be paid for at the rate of $1 each.

Big Fill Put in By County at Westfir

Work was completed Saturday on dirt and rock fill across a portion of the log pond of the Western Lumber company at Westfir, replacing a 100-foot wooden bridge. P. M. New, county engineer, was there at the time the wooden culvert was placed and work had to be rushed into completion of letting the water back into the pond. The putting in of the culvert makes one less bridge for the county to maintain. Rock was obtained from a large pile of it taken out of the mountain nearby when the Southern Pacific company bored its tunnel through the mountain between Westfir and Oakridge.

It has been estimated that there are still approximately 6,000,000 acres in the world.
