Stomach stays settled after Crisco-fried foods

"Oh, Mrs. Tasker, you're deep-frying onion rings. I love them, but they always unsettle my stomach."

"I was the same way until I changed to Crisco. But Crisco is such a creamy, pure fat, that I digest fried foods easily now."

How Mrs. Tasker deep-fries CRISPY ONION RINGS with Crisco, the quick-digesting fat

Cut large onions across into slices about 1/4 inch thick. Separate slices into rings. Dip rings into milk, dredge with flour. Melt enough Crisco to fill ordinary deep saucan 1/2 full. Slowly heat Crisco to 365°-375° F., or until it will brown an inch cube of bread in 60 seconds. (This is the beautiful way to fry, because Crisco is the quick-digesting fat). Fry onion rings until brown, drain on absorbent paper. Salt just before serving. Strain the Crisco through fine sieve into a special can. Use this Crisco for frying over and over again. It will not make other foods taste "oniony." It will not spoil quickly. Crisco keeps digestible!
