THURSDAY PROGRAMS

McDONALD: Double bill, "The Flame Within," starring Ann Harding, plus "The Daring Young Man," with James Dunn. Ends Saturday.

HEILIG: Double bill. "Transient Lady," with Gene Raymond, plus "Paradise Canyon," with John Wayne. Ends Saturday.

REX: "G-Men," with Jimmy Cagney, Ann Dvorak. Ends Saturday.

STATE: Double bill, "When a Man's a Man," with George O'Brien, plus "Woman in the Dark," with Fay Wray. Ends Saturday.

"Transient Lady," on the Heilig screen, is an adaptation of the Liberty serial of that name. Gene Raymond plays the masculine lead, and the picture follows the story quite closely. Which means it's a good show. "Paradise Canyon," with John Wayne is—well, let's quote "see Wayne trading punches for bullets in a blood-stirring drama of the old west!"

• • •

McDonald's "Flame Within" is the story of a lady psychiatrist who discovers that, despite all her theories on love, she is not immune to it. Ann Harding plays well in a role made to order for her. "The Daring Young Man," same bill, is a pleasing, joyful comedy, with James Dunn in the title role.

• • •

State offers another successor to "Thin Man," this time Dashiell Hammitt's "Woman in the Dark." Fay Wray and a large supporting cast make it a good picture. And on the same bill is one of the best westerns ever made—George O'Brien in "When a Man's a Man."

• • •

Jimmy O'Connell has moved the "G-Men" over to the Rex, following its boxoffice cleanup at the McDonald. Jimmy Cagney and Ann Dvorak, Robert Armstrong and Margaret Lindsay in a story that crackles from the front page in a burst of machine gun fire. The government agents drive on crime, to be less flowery. Recommended.
