FAIRBANKS-MORSE Refrigerator

WINS

FIRST PRIZE

AT NATIONAL INVENTORS' CONGRESS

... as the most useful household appliance invention

The foremost inventors of the nation have just conferred upon the new Fairbanks-Morse refrigerator the highest honor within their power.

The National Inventors' Congress, held at Tulsa, conferred upon the Conservador feature of the Fairbanks-Morse Refrigerator—FIRST PRIZE! First prize, because they considered this feature the most useful household invention.

What IS the CONSERVADOR?

It is an inner door behind the main door, lined with shelves which hold the most frequently used items. Opens automatically at the touch of a button.

See this new refrigerator today, and you will understand instantly why this highest honor has been conferred upon it—why it is setting new sales records never before approached by any new refrigerator. Open the door and see the CONSERVADOR. You'll say it's the greatest convenience and economy feature you ever saw on any refrigerator—just as the inventors of America did. Come in and see for yourself.
