Less rain fell in Eugene in June, 1935, than in any other June in the past 11 years except in 1928 and 1929, according to the monthly weather report given Monday by Mrs. G. In June, 1929, the rainfall was the same as in June this year and in 1928 it was .18 of an inch.

The temperature was low, a greater part of the month although it reached as high as 93 degrees during the fore part.

A table of temperatures and rainfall for the month in the past 11 years is given as follows:

potato and beet dishes from last week's contest.

Harvard Beets
1/2 cup vinegar,
1/2 tablespoon cornstarch

Mix sugar and cornstarch, add vinegar and let boil 5 minutes. Add beets which have been sliced and let them stand on back of stove for about 20 minutes. Just before serving add 2 tablespoons butter.—Elaine Barel, Rt. 2, Box 58-A, Eugene.

Special Summer Salad
4 cups, cooked and sliced (new) potatoes, use small ones, about the size of an egg; 1/2 cup French dressing; 1 teaspoon sugar; 1 onion, minced; 1/2 cup finely chopped blanched almonds; 1/2 cup mayonnaise; 1/2 cup sliced celery; 1/2 cup sliced cucumber, use firm part of cucumber only; 2 chopped hard cooked eggs; 1/2 cup cooked peas; salt and pepper to season; any salad greens; 1/2 cup cooked (bleached) carrots may be added.

Add the sugar to the French dressing, stir into the potatoes and chill for several hours. Then add the remaining ingredients, except the salad greens, and chill at least an hour longer. Serve on the salad green with additional mayonnaise and a garnish of parsley, sliced sweet pickles, or radish roses.

A potato salad is not only economical and nourishing but can be made a very festive dish, and new potatoes because of their delicate flavor and firm texture are especially adapted for making savory salads.—Mrs. W. R. Armstrong, 1392 W 11th Ave., Eugene.

Stuffed Beets Deluxe
Cut a slice off the bottoms of whole cooked beets (medium or large), so that they will stand straight. Scoop out the centers, and mix the part taken out with a rather thick, rich, well seasoned cream sauce, and a few walnut kernels chopped coarse. Fill the centers with this mixture, place on an oiled baking sheet, and keep in the refrigerator ready to be heated just before serving. These are unusually good and pretty for any holiday or party luncheon or dinner.—Mrs. M. C. Hack, 558 E. 16th, Eugene.

as it passed the Senate, a warning that it would be changed or "doiled" in conference.

He said there would be a roll call in the House on a motion to substitute the House bill for the Senate bill and "that will put them in record."

"If they don't put back the holding company elimination section," Wheeler said, "I would sooner see no bill at all."

May Go To Country

He said he would be prepared to "go to the country" with the measure and fight "in every congressional district" those opposing it.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the reconstruction corporation and himself a man of large wealth, privately had entered the fight in behalf of the administration. House sources said he had sent urgent personal telegrams to some members appealing for support of the so-called "death sentence" provision.

Leadership is Divided

The Democratic leadership was divided. When Speaker Byrnes walked through the tellers to vote "aye," several Democrats applauded, and there even were a couple of rebel yells.

Other Democratic split: Representative Roland of Pennsylvania, the Democratic whip, voted against the amendment. Nobody in the gallery saw Representative O'Connor of New York, Democratic chairman of the rules committee, pass through the tellers.

Other Democratic chiefs who voted for the amendment included Chairman Doughton (D., N.C.) of the ways and means committee, Chairman Jones (D., Tex.) of the agriculture committee, Chairman Rayburn (D., Tex.) of the interstate commerce committee.

Most Republicans voted against the amendment. Among them were Representative Snell of New York, the G.O.P. floor leader; Representative Ranley (R. Pa.), Trendway (R., Mass.), Crowther (R., N.Y.) and Bacharach (R., N.Y.).

The House accepted, by a 114 to 101 teller vote, an amendment suggested by Representative Monahan (D., Mont.) to prevent contributions to political campaigns by utility interests.

On a preceding standing vote the House stood 114 to 24 against the proposal.

The House voted 163 to 101 to leave up to the securities commission whether to outline services, sales, and construction contracts between holding and subsidiary companies.

manager of the airport, who was unable to be present.

At the luncheon it was announced that the first three women to take out membership in the local association had been registered. They were Mrs. Alma Burbee and Mrs. Juanita Madsen, Beaverton, and Mrs. Virginia Smith, Eugene.

Starting at 1:30 with a mass flight over the city, the meet got under way with a contest in model airplane flights which was won by Frances Eaton who received a free airplane ride donated by the association.

Spot Landing Not Easy

The first event for visiting planes was the spot landing contest, pilots attempting to get their planes down within a space marked out by white lines. Pilot Nichols, Beaverton, was first in this contest, receiving a prize donated by the Nordling Parts company with Walter Burbee, Portland, second, the prize being given by the Sunset Oil and Perkins Oil company. Third prize, donated by the Penney's Drug company, went to Harold Warner, Portland.

Prizes in the wing-over and figure-eight contest were as follows: First, Howard Briggs, Beaverton, a sweater; second, Walter Rupert, Portland, prize from the Sunset Oil and Perkins Oil company.

The bombing contest attracted considerable interest, the bombs consisting of paper sacks filled with flour, rocks and small torpedoes. Pilots flew their planes over a large white circle marked out on the field in front of the hangar. A. R. MacFarlane, Beaverton, was first in this contest, the prize being donated by the Heird and Roach sporting goods store; second prize donated by the Clarke Battery and Electric company, went to Alfred Fox, of Springfield; with third prize, from the Carrol Drug company, going to Harold Wagner, Portland.

Two of the paper-sack bombs "exploded" just in front of spectators, dusting them with flour as pilots miscalculated in their attempt to hit the circle.

In the race for visiting planes, first prize was won by Howard Briggs, Beaverton, the Nordling Parts company donating the prize. Other prizes went to Tommy Burbee, Portland, Kyndall Drug company; Walter Rupert, Portland, Bronway Cash Store; Bill Madsen, Beaverton, Sunset Oil Company.

The prize for the first woman landing on the field, donated by the Antique Shop, went to Mrs. Burbee, of Beaverton. The second prize, donated by the Vogue Beauty Salon, was won by Mrs. Madsen. Other women's prizes were given by Irb's Beauty Academy, Loie's Beauty Salon.

An alleged quarrel between pickets at Westfir and asserted members of the I-L organization Saturday night was reported here Monday, but state police and sheriff deputies declared no trouble had resulted. According to the story heard here, I-L members exchanged heated words with pickets near the Western Lumber company mill, but the affair did not come to blows. Sheriff C. A. Swartz and Deputies Canada and Hathaway were in Westfir Monday while lumber was being loaded in the plant's yard, and they reported no trouble with the pickets. Picketing is being continued, but work at the plant and in the woods is progressing normally, it was said.
