

BOEING BOMBER'S MAIDEN HOP SET FOR COMING WEEK

SEATTLE, July 20.—Further inspections and minor adjustments delayed the maiden voyage in the air of the huge Boeing bomber, scheduled for this afternoon, until possibly late Monday afternoon.

Lea Tower, chief test pilot of the Boeing aviation company, placed his approval on the fitness of the four-motored 15-ton battleship of the air after the second of a series of outdoor tests yesterday.

With Tower at the controls the mighty aerial fortress was taxied around Boeing field for 18 minutes, its 700-horsepower motors driving it ahead at tremendous speed.

The pilot made minor adjustments in the motors and other equipment and after the test pronounced the plane ready for its first flight.

Build on a specifications calling for a plane capable of making 250 miles an hour and of flying 2,500 miles nonstop, the craft will be taken to Dayton, Ohio, sometime in August for competition against other bombers for United States army contracts.

Boeing company officials guarded closely the construction details of the plane and it was not exposed to public view until this week, when it was brought out of the shops for a test of its powerful motors.

The plane, 15 feet high and with a 100-foot wingspread, has machine gun turrets, automatic flying equipment, the new radio directional compass, quarters for a crew of ten men, and streamlining features expected to increase its speed.

HELEN MICHAELS' ESSAY WINS 1ST IN STATE CONTEST

Helen Michaels, 14 year old Eugene high school student, whose essay "The Spanish American War," won first prize in the contest sponsored by the General Lawton Auxiliary to the Spanish American War Veterans, was awarded first place in the state contest at the recent department convention held in Roseburg. The state prize was $5 and the General Lawton camp also awarded $5.

The prize-winning essay follows: "The war between the United States and Spain was the outgrowth of the humanity of the American people and their love for fair play. They did not stand by when Spain was starving the people of Cuba into submission to her will, but sent food, medicine and clothing to the sufferers. When Spain became intolerable the United States stepped in and demanded that the oppression must cease.

"Our government decided to send one of our battleships to stay at Havana for a while so that American citizens might feel safer. On February 15, 1898 this ship was blown up. President McKinley appointed me to investigate the explosion, which found that the ship had been destroyed by a mine, but could not prove that the Spaniards had purposely caused the explosion.

"On April 18, congress declared that the United States must interfere and help the Cubans to become free and prosperous people. Many land and sea battles followed. The war of the manila was a valiant, clean and victorious fight for freedom. Dewey at Manila, Commodore Schley and Admiral Sampson in Cuban waters, and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, with his Rough Riders near Santiago, won much recognition.

"After the war there were many problems confronting the United States, such as what to do with prisoners. It would cost too much to guard and feed them so it was decided to send them back to Spain. These Spanish prisoners were given the same kind of treatment and care that the Americans received. A Spanish steamship company was given the contract to convey the troops to Spain.

"The Philippine feature caused a great deal of debate about the ratification of the treaty with Spain, but many people in the United States were influenced to favor the treaty by the insurrection of Aguinaldo's men, as they could not withdraw from the islands in face of an uprising because of national honor was involved.

"By the treaty, Spain agreed to cede to United States the islands of Porto Rico, Guam and Philippines. Our country was to govern Cuba until the Cubans could manage their own affairs. We gave Spain $20,000,000 and assumed the claims of our citizens for damages done in Cuba during the insurrection. Spanish ships and merchandise were admitted into the island for ten years on the same terms as American ships and goods. The cost of our government was increased, our commerce expanded, and a new field for American ideas and institutions was established.

"When we took control of the Philippines, slavery, polygamy and other barbaric practices were in use. Our duty was to maintain law and order and teach these partially civilized fighting people. We have broken the murmuring people from bondage by bringing them better health, wealth and happiness, than they had before. We have made the American union more perfect and perpetual.

"Measured by its effects on the United States and the world, it was one of the most important wars in which we have been engaged. For better or for worse the United States dropped its traditional policy of isolation and stepped out upon the broad stage of international affairs."

Dr. and Floyd Milne of Portland were down Tuesday visiting friends and relatives.
