

Five Guesses--- Who Are We? Famous Quintuplets Pose for Lane County Guessers

An inimitable little actress here registers astonishment in a way a stage celebrity might envy. Wide eyes, upraised hand and open mouth (from which peeps a tiny tooth) are all there. But the smile that calls forth this quinn's best efforts is that of coquette. Her coy mannerisms have made her known as the nursery flirt. You've seen her picture, but do you know which quinn she is?

You'd never believe it, from her calm, attentive pose, but this quinn is the stormy petrel of the Dionne nursery. Not that she's naughty; goodness, no! But those tiny hands, so peacefully overlapped, are usually involved in mischief. Can you name her?

The wardrobe of every young lady should include a summer play suit, in the opinion of this particular Miss Dionne. The best natured of all the good-natured quins, she finds there's nothing like it for an active baby who enjoys flailing her plump little arms about in abandon, as she seems ready to do. Her name is familiar, but do you recognize her by her face?

The sweet, sad and serious gaze which she directs camera-ward reveals the quiet, ethereal nature which has distinguished this baby from her heavier, stronger and livelier sisters. So marked has been the retiring personality of this quintuplet in contrast to the exuberance of the other four, that she has been known as "the Madonna of the quins." Note the dainty "expression" of her right hand. Her name should be the easiest of all for you to guess.

Whatever the object of this quinn's attentions, it certainly has her agog, judging from that gleeful, excited gaze, the tiny mouth about to break into a laugh, and that pudgy hand firmly gripping the tray edge. This particular baby must have her entertainment, and when none is in sight, she goes out of her way to create it. Like one of her sisters, this merry Dionne is a veritable pixie for mischief. Well, what's your score? Did you name all five correctly?
