

QUESTIONNAIRE TO GIVE CLEAR VIEW OF DONNA OUTLOOK

A complete picture of the situation in which approximately 200 Lane county families, applicants for farms in the federal rural rehabilitation project at Donna, are in at the present time, is expected to be obtained through a questionnaire to be sent out this week by Howard Johnston, in charge of the project. The questionnaires are now being prepared in his office and will be mailed out to the families as soon as completed.

The questionnaire covers seven large pages and if the blanks are all filled out, the rehabilitation office will have had a complete history of the farming experience of each family, also of the work in which the heads of the families have been engaged since during all the years they began to work and information as to the number of members in each family, the state of their health, the extent of their ownership of farm machinery and equipment, livestock and other farm belongings.

This information is required so that the rural rehabilitation office may determine the eligibility of each family, based on experience in the various lines of farming in the past and upon their fitness to conduct the farms which they are seeking to occupy. Out of the 200 families which are to receive the questionnaire only between 20 and 30 will be accepted for the project but the information received from the others will be used in determining the eligibility of those to be placed on individual projects in the rural rehabilitation program that is being carried out by the federal government and of those who might be placed on other projects similar to the one at Donna if it is decided in the future to establish others.

The questionnaires being sent out is designed to elicit information, aside from that concerning stock and equipment, as to number in the family and the state of their health, regarding the amount of feed and seed they already have on hand, and what they have had in the past. It is also required that each family have ten references from persons with whom they have done business in the past five years, and from the families that have not been in Lane county all these five years references must be had from the county agent where they came from in order that the rehabilitation officers may contact him.

All this information supplied by the applicants, will be followed up by personal interviews, which alone will require a great deal of time.

Just when the families to be placed on the farms will be selected has not yet been announced by Mr. Johnston, but the selection will be gradual, he said Monday. Some are expected to be chosen soon after the return of the questionnaires and others as rapidly as the information is received.

A major role in Italy's seemingly inevitable war with Abyssinia may be assigned to the heir to the Italian throne, handsome 30-year-old Crown Prince Humbert, shown here, strikingly uniformed. Humbert, Rome reports say, may take the active command of his army division if hostilities break out.

CONSTITUTIONAL ACTS BROADENED

framers that rarely has constitutional modification come about in that way. As a consequence the greater burden of constitutional adaptation has fallen upon the Court.

While the early declaration that ours is a government of law, not men may in a sense be true, it is equally true that the men compose the courts and that in their interpretations make laws.

Marshall and Taney

Marshall, following the Federalist principles of the times, moulded the Constitution to coincide with those ideas. Taney, an ardent adherent to the States' Rights doctrine, moulded it in that direction in response, perhaps, to the opinion of the prevailing political power of the era.

The refusal of the Senate to confirm President Hoover's appointment of Judge Parker to the Supreme Bench was no accident. It was a frank recognition that the personnel of the Court determines the direction of constitutional development and that a proposed member of the Court must be in accord with economic and political philosophy of the day.

(4) Political parties have by no means been consistent in their positions as to the extension of Federal powers. Attitudes toward, and interpretations of, the sphere of Federal activity on the part of political parties seem to be closely correlated to the effects of a particular extension of governmental authority upon the economic interests which are dominant within the various political parties.

Process of Adaptation

The character of the process of constitutional adaptation has thus depended upon the wise or unwise choice of statesmen reflecting in the political arena the economic interests they have represented.

(5) Not only has the Constitution been the result of evolution, but each age has been confronted with the problem of determining the direction of its growth.

The question of the relation of the States to the Federal Government has not been decided by the opinion of any one generation. Because it is a question of evolution, each and every stage of our economic, social and political development presents the problem in a new form and it becomes a new question.

People Hold Ultimate Answers

We are now confronted with the economic problems of a new era, and while the evolution of concepts over the past hundred and fifty years plays an important and to some degree a determining influence, it is also true that the answer which the American people gives to the economic, social and political problems with which they are now confronted will determine the relations between the State and Federal Governments.

Before the American people is the practical question as to the acceptance of the fundamental principles of the New Deal as a part of our constitutional system.

Should the American people accept the extension of Federal authority involved in the economic and political program of the New Deal? Is the program of the New Deal in accordance with the fundamental constitutional principles?

The answer to these questions is to be found not only by an appeal to the past, but by a very careful analysis of the economic and political problems involved in the light of present circumstances.

FAIRGROUNDS PLAN PRESENTED MONDAY AT JOINT MEETING

Plans for new buildings at the Lane county fairgrounds and rearrangement of others under the proposed WPA project for the improvement of the grounds were presented by R. H. Townsend, SEIA engineer, at a joint meeting of the county court and county fair board at the courthouse Monday afternoon.

The plans as received from the SEIA Offices and submitted by the Engineer Townsend include the erection of a auditorium and auditor near the entrance to the grounds, the building of a little theatre facing Thirteenth avenue, and near the entrance, and the moving of the grandstand at the race track to the north side of the track.

The engineer also submitted plans for the drainage of the fairgrounds and other details to come under the proposed project.

Application was signed by County Judge Fred Fisk Monday afternoon for a WPA project calling for $200 to be used for clerical work.

COST OF CAMPUS TO BE ESTIMATED

university however, does not want to stand in the way of the state if it deems the university campus essential for the location of a statehouse.

No Estimate Made

Smith stated that his committee had made no estimate of any value of its property but would have to have suitable buildings on a suitable location if it is to be shifted. He added: "The joint committee entered into a general discussion of site possibilities both for the statehouse and the university. No definite conclusion was arrived at. The university was asked to restate its estimates on what it would require by way of past and site and submit its figures at a later meeting of the board."

Meantime the governor's committee will try to carry out the suggestions of Governor Martin to ascertain possibilities of acquiring ground on the north side of Court street to supplement the present site.

The planning board this week will complete its preliminary application for a 45 per cent grant for the proposed $3,500,000 capital building from the federal government. The governor stated Senator Charles L. McNary again urged speed in making the application because he wished it presented before he returns to Oregon early next month.

Martin told the groups the planning board decided the present grounds were too small and that the only hope, other than condemnation proceedings on property to the north, which likewise will be considered, was purchase of the Willamette campus, approximately 14 acres.

BEER PARLOR IS RAIDED ON COAST

In a raid by county and state officers on the Hoot Owl cafe on the Coast highway two miles north of Florence early Sunday morning, Harry Isaac was arrested for selling beer without a state license and a keg of beer and two money slot machines were confiscated. Monday a complaint was issued in Justice of the Peace Dan Johnston's court, charging O. L. Smith, the proprietor of the place, with the sale of beer without a license and with setting up and operating the slot machines, also charging Isaac with the sale of beer without license.

The officers say that the cafe at the time of the raid was filled with men and women drinking beer and playing the slot machines.

The place, according to the officers, had a beer license in 1934, but failed to get it renewed for 1935.

Frank Reid, an attorney for Isaac, appeared in court Monday afternoon early Sunday at not guilty entered. Bail in the sum of $500 was set, but was not furnished. The trial will be set later.

New Income Tax Rates Made Public

WASHINGTON, July 29.—(P)—Washed new tax rates, topping incomes as low as $50,000 and taking away three-quarters of that portion of an income over $5,000,000, were made public today by the house ways and means committee.

At present the tax on a $50,000 income is $9,500. The proposed new schedule would make it $9,500. The present levy on $1,000,000 however is $235,000 whereas the new tax would amount to $241,000.

Funeral Services Set For Mrs. Aya

BEND, Ore., July 19.—(P)—Mrs. Amelia Aya, 83, for more than forty years a resident of Eugene, died here early Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Montgomery, after a long illness. Funeral services will be held from St. Mary's Catholic church in Eugene Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in Mt. Calvary cemetery at Eugene. Mrs. Aya, whose husband, Louis Aya, died in Eugene in 1914, is survived by six children, Norbert Aya of Astoria, Mrs. George D. Heitman of Eugene, Alfred A. Aya of Portland, Mrs. J. W. F. Smith of San Pedro, Cal., A. W. Aya of Medford and Mrs. Montgomery.

On Thursday and Friday the schedules are the same as those for Tuesday and Wednesday, respectively, with the exception that there is no adult class Friday night.

Another major division of the art-craft activities is the paper and cloth stamping work carried on by Miss Louise Utter. Miss Utter directs the cutting of designs from potatoes and the transferring of these designs from the surface in relief to paper and cloth. By a multiple application of the raised surface, covered with oil paints of various colors, artistic designs can be made. Another phase of Miss Utter's work includes paper design cutting. A public exhibition of all of the work done by the pupils in this department is planned for the near future. Two hour classes are held twice a week at each playground: Monday and Wednesday at 1 p. m., at Condon; at 3 p. m., at Willard; Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p. m., at Lincoln; at 3 p. m., at Skinner's Butte.

HOLDING COMPANY HEAD GETS PROFIT

for speaking against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill. The committee refused to permit him to read a prepared statement accusing it of "mud-slinging."

Testimony on Hopson's profits was given by S. C. Ross, accountant for the New York state utility investigation.

Gets By Profit

Senator Gehlwellenbach of Washington also placed in the record a statement that between 1924 and 1929 Hopson got half of a profit of $1,357,000 in one of the companies in which he had invested only $48,000.

Ross testified the operating company had paid about $8,000,000 during the depression years to Hopson's companies for services and had no discretion about the amount.

He presented much testimony of the private companies charging several times what the services cost them.

They charged two and a half times what they paid their men, he said, with one exception. It was through this system, Ross said, that Hopson controlled the system.

Many officers of the private companies, drawing big salaries from them, were also elected officials of the holding and operating companies, he said.

Can't Find Hopson

The committee called Joseph P. McCarthy, a committee investigator, to tell of his efforts to find Hopson. McCarthy said he had been looking for him since a week ago Friday.

The last evidence of Hopson's presence at the company offices, he said, was on July 8, when he sent a telegram to William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher, at San Simeon, California, asking his cooperation to block the holding company bill.

The telegram, as placed in the records, follows:

"Have just been advised that there is great likelihood that house holding company bill will pass tomorrow completely disregarding its probable unconstitutionality. Hopson your people will use every influence they have to prevent this breaking down of the prestige of the constitution."
