SEATTLE SHOWS NEW FERRY!

The world's most modern vessel is the claim made for this striking looking craft, pictured from the air with Seattle's soaring skyline as an effective background. The motor ferry Kalakala is the first large fully streamlined vessel ever built, say its designers. It is 276 feet long and provides speedy service on Puget Sound between Seattle and Bremerton, Wash.

was telling how she used the last money that was sent to her from the society, travel being so difficult where she is. She says, "I have bought what is called here a baby Ford. It is a ten horse power engine in a little car made in England for use in places where they charge by weight for the license and insurance cost about $80 a year. That and the high price of gasoline makes it very expensive to run a car here. But it is a very wonderful help as we can go to villages away from the railroad that need our help. One village where we had to ride a half hour by rail and then an hour by donkey and spend all day there to get back. We can go in our car in 40 minutes and be home by 1 o'clock. They had battery trouble along the last of February and it was in April before they had it fixed so as to use the car. That, she says, is how slow the east is. Here it is a matter of a few seconds to install a new battery."
