EDITOR'S CHAIR MADE EASY.

GEORGE K. AIKEN, editor and publisher of the Ontario Argus, has been freed of contempt charges for which he was cited by Circuit Judge George W. Ellis. The Ontario editor had flared at what he termed "inequality" in the treatment of criminals; and Judge Ellis, whose parole grant to a convicted thief was questioned, was quick to see contempt of court in such publication, charging Aiken with "false and untrue" statements.

By his wise dismissal of the case against Aiken, the Eastern Oregon magistrate has relieved a situation which augured no end of misunderstanding between the press and the judiciary of the state; and has averted a delicate ruling which, to a large extent, would have determined the Oregon definition of that fundamental prerogative, "freedom of the press"—a definition which is at once both unnecessary and unwanted.

Many editors of the state, when informed of the charges made against Aiken, commented editorially upon the fine opportunity presented for the formation of a precedent in Oregon newspaper contempt cases. They welcomed the erection of an iron-clad rule hedging the newspapers of the state so that wary editors might know at all times when they were venturing without the bounds of propriety and might be thus saved from the humiliation of a chance criminal court proceeding. Such a view is neither a healthy nor a proper one.

JAMBOREE DISAPPOINTMENT.

THIRTY-THREE Boy Scouts of Eugene and the Willamette valley suffered near heart-break Thursday afternoon when they read of the President's seemingly hard-hearted cancellation of the National Boy Scout Jamboree, scheduled to be held in Washington the latter part of this month. And well might they feel that something immensely important had been taken from their summer program. On August 15, they were to embark on a 6000-mile trip to the national capital, which was to take them through nearly every state in the union, and give them an opportunity to see the sights of New York, Chicago, and the San Diego exposition. Already each boy had spent approximately $50 fitting himself for the trip east.

When came the abrupt news that preparations for the Jamboree were at an end. Boys, breathlessly awaiting their first trip across the continent, their first ride in a subway, and their first glimpse at the Gulf of Mexico, need not be expected to realize the reason for the presidential decree. They have planned, saved and worked for this "trip of trips."

CLAY PALMER TO LEAVE.

COURAGEOUS, progressive, human, Rev. Clay Palmer has been an influential personage during his seven years of ministry in the First Congregational church of Eugene. Now he goes to Walla Walla on a call from a large Congregational church there. In the ministry, change is an expected thing though in many ways a regrettable thing. Wherever Mr. Palmer goes he will always have real friends in this town.

The Gospel as Mr. Palmer interprets it is a very human thing. The Christianity he preaches begins with good will in the every day transactions of man and man. He sees the Christian as a good citizen applying his intelligence and his conscience to all the complex relationships of the human kind. Therefore he has worked ardently for peace and for the application of Christian concepts to business and politics. He has been a champion of tolerance. He has been plain spoken, plain living, sincere, and the ministrant in every community needs such men.

RELATIVES ON TOUR.

THE Kansas City, Kan., doctor who rounded up 25 of his wife's relatives, loaded them into a big green school bus, and set out for two weeks of sightseeing, has shown the world something new in the way of vacations. The doctor is so pleased with his experiment that he is recommending it to others. Probably there will be few to follow his example. To a great many people, two weeks spent with 25 relatives is not precisely the picture of rest and recreation a vacation should bring.

relatives, fishing for trout, or lolling on a beach doesn't matter so long as the outing is the vacationer's own idea of a good time. If it is, he will return to work refreshed and rested.

The vacation season is certainly a time for "every man to his taste"—even to bus riding with relatives.

H. G. Wells is said to be the most prolific writer of the age. And all this time we thought it was Anonymous.

Business is getting to be so good, that many of us have already forgotten about the forgotten man.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER Register-Guard Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The tax bill is about as popular as a can of snot milk at a picnic. Your correspondent cannot find anyone who is even mildly enthusiastic over any tax program which is likely to emerge out of this Congress.

Nevertheless, President Roosevelt, despite all the horrible mismanagement of the program, remains relatively serene, and the chief secret of his serenity is this:

Roosevelt has high hopes of going into the election next year with a balanced budget.

As soon as the derisive laughter has subsided, your correspondent will proceed to admit that such hopes are not shared by everybody in the administration. But the president has a very distinct idea that business is going to pick up very rapidly, that the national income will go booming, that unemployment and its costs will be materially reduced, and that the yield from current tax rates plus those of the new schedule—which would bring in less than $300,000,000 additional revenue, under last year's conditions—will produce a Treasury status to which he can point with pride.

The idea that as a corporation and individual incomes begin to rise, a geometrically enlarging proportion of the increase will be scooped off in taxes.

F. R. Hurle a Brick

But it is still worth remembering that revenue was only incidental in Roosevelt's mind when he called for "soak-the-rich" tax legislation from a startled Congress.

He was primarily interested in establishing a social principle and hurling a defiant brick at the "big fellows" who had been attacking him savagely.

By failing to meet progressive demands—and the desire of many in his administration—for a comprehensive program to bring widespread wide-spread accusations that he was burdening business—as well as the bad effects of whatever there may be in that contention.

Slap at Power Trust

The proposal to eliminate tax exemption for corporation gifts to charity was just another Roosevelt swipe at the "power trust," his pet hate. The House bill, however, allowed a 5 per cent taxable income exemption.

Even more unpleasant to the White House was the paring of the proposed graduated corporation tax from a spread of 6 per cent to a difference of 1 per cent.

The graduation from 13 1/2 per cent to 14 1/2 per cent established the principle of taxing "bigness"—the Brandeis-Frankfurter idea—about as effectively as a nudist proclaims his principles by going barefoot. Expect a fight on that in the Senate, with results uncertain.

Another Governor "on Pan"

Puerto Rican newspapers are attacking Gov. Blanton Winship with all the gay abandon which used to feature their blasts at Gov. Bob Gore, resigned. Translating freely from a humorous rag pretending to describe renovation of La Fortaleza, governmental palace at San Juan, one finds:

"The palace has 11 apartments—four for sleeping, four for lounging, and three for repose. . . . The governor works in a hammock, with a goldfish bowl full of red herring nearby. There is a hammock in his office for each of his advisers."

Many Would Save Nation

An embarrassment of riches faces the administration as candidates for the country announce themselves against Democratic members of Congress who have opposed the New Deal.

For instance, five men have already decided to enter the Democratic congressional primary against George Huddleston of Alabama, leader of the fight against the administration on the holding company bill. Already it begins to look as if the anti-Huddleston vote would be spread around sufficiently to let George walk back in.

Congressmen Josh Lee, Will Rogers, and Wesley Disney of Oklahoma are all openly coveting the seat of Senator Tom Gore and other entries are likely.

Reports of the candidacy of Rogers, who got to Congress because voters thought he recognized a familiar name, caused an unbelieving but amused newspaperman to ask Rogers:

"Why don't you stop all these silly rumors about your running for the Senate?"

"That's no rumor," Rogers replied. "Ever since I got here I've considered this a training school for the Senate."

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and high blood pressure and to permit the sufferer to live as long as possible, certain measures are desirable. The various possible causes of the condition must be investigated and removed or controlled if possible.

Next to the burden on the tissues concerned, as the blood vessels, the heart, and the kidney, must be removed or lightened as much as possible. Then everything should be done that can be done to improve the quality of the human tissues so they will be able to work more efficiently.

If every person would have his blood pressure measured at fairly frequent intervals, it would be possible to detect rises fairly early and thus to bring them more quickly under control.

By a careful study of the life of the person concerned, the doctor may get an idea as to whether he is likely to develop a high blood pressure, or "H. A. D." hypertensive arterial disease.

Thus it is known that the condition tends to run in families. The fact that a father, mother, grandfather, or grandmother died from a stroke may be an indication for frequent study of the blood pressure.

Because of the importance of rest in controlling this condition, it is well to have an analysis of the habits of the individual as related to work, sleep, exercise, diet, worry, and similar factors.

Areas of infection in the teeth and in the tonsils should be cleaned up. Gradual inflammation of the kidneys may be going on for some time without being noticed. Tenderness of the blood pressure in the individual to sudden fluctuations may be determined by a simple test, which involves putting one hand in ice water for one minute, measuring the blood pressure simultaneously in the other arm.

If the person with high blood pressure is surrounded by people who regularly affect his blood pressure badly, it may be necessary for him to be removed to a rest cure, a sanatorium, a resort, or some similar place in which the disturbing and blood pressure stimulating factors will not be present.

If the problem is one of financial worry, the difficulty is naturally a special problem.

The diet of the person concerned should contain enough protein to take care of his body's requirement. It used to be the thing to eliminate meat entirely. This is no longer advocated.

Salt in moderate amounts is permissible, but all condiments and spices should be used most sparingly, as they may irritate the blood vessel system.

The usual amount or slightly more than the usual amount of water is permitted in most cases. Coffee and other stimulants should not be taken late in the day, but moderate amounts of tea, coffee, or tobacco may be permitted to those who are used to them.

In this condition especially, the old medical proverb—moderation in all things—is important to remember.

Stories in STAMPS The WASHINGTON of AUSTRALIA AUSTRALIA

RIVALING Washington D. C. scenic charm, Canberra (on first syllable) is fast becoming Australia's most beautiful city. Little more than 100 years old, artificial capital was a mere headquarters for a sheep ranch and had a white population of 10,000.

In 1901, plans for the new day of taking form, for the day of that year marked the winning of the Australian Commonwealth, and the country's constitution called for the formation of a capital city.

A Chicagoan, Walter B. Coy, won a world-wide contest for the city's plans, and what was believed to be "Australia's Elephant" now promises to come a model garden city and a grand center.

Australia celebrated completion of its Parliament buildings in 1927 and issued a stamp above to mark the event.
