CITY, BOGGS SHARE HEAVY FIRE LOSSES

the time firemen arrived, the building was in flames, which soon spread to the city maintenance plant.

The city was a big loser. Cal Bryan, city recorder, estimated that approximately $4000 would be needed to replace the equipment destroyed and rebuild the sheds on the south side of the maintenance yard. The building must be completely torn down, he said. Street marking equipment and shop tools were completely destroyed. The paving plant was saved, although the building was burned on all sides.

Bryan said early Monday that no plans for replacement had yet been made. He intimated that city councilmen would make plans for the erection of a new plant at their regular meeting Monday night.

Never before July, 1935, has Eugene had a city inventory showing supplies on hand and depreciation on equipment, it was announced Monday by Cal Bryan, city recorder. The final departmental inventory, that of the street department, was handed to Bryan on July 15. He is now busy setting up the different accounts taken from a compilation of the various department records.

Saturday night's fire, which destroyed thousands of dollars worth of material and equipment in the city maintenance plant, made only too plain the significance of a city inventory. The equipment, "book valued" at fore than $1500, had but $350 in insurance coverage, but may cost $4,500 to replace with new stuff. If the loss had occurred before July 15, there would have been no record whatsoever of what had been destroyed.

Bryan called for the inventory reports from the municipal departments early in the summer, and all are now on hand. He will make a complete compilation of the information contained in the records and will set up books showing the current material purchases and usage, depreciation charges on machinery and equipment, and a complete property inventory. From these records, Bryan declared, can be obtained a true picture of the city's assets as well as figures on the day-to-day disbursements of the various departments.

The city, according to Bryan, spends approximately $60,000 for materials each year. Records of the supplies thus purchased have never been kept.

Mayor Elisha Large could recall no time when the city had kept a record of the equipment on hand. John Fields, for many years bookkeeper in the offices of the city recorder and the city treasurer, said that he remembered no previous inventories. Officials recalled that in the Eugene city audit, made ten years ago by a Portland firm, an inventory check was made, but no records were kept.

Bryan plans to order an inventory of supplies and equipment at least once each year. In addition daily reports will be made. In this way, information for a rapid calculation of the assets of the city will at all times be available. Depreciation charges can be determined, and records may be compiled to provide experience tables for future city administrations.

RELIEF PROTEST MEETING PLANNED

Relief grievances, alleged hardships imposed on those employed in harvesting bean crops, protests against Governor Martin's recent requirement that penitentiary prisoners convicted of moral crimes sumbit to sterilization as the basis for parole, and numerous other matters will be given an airing Tuesday evening at a meeting which the All Workers union will hold at 382 Eighth avenue, west.

The All Workers union is one of two organizations among persons on relief and has been in frequent controversy with the more conservative United Workers League as to the demands which should be placed before the authorities. There are four topics for the Tuesday night meeting:

(1) Charges that workers in the local bean fields are not being treated fairly; (2) Protests that Governor Charles H. Martin's "sterilization" policy points for ultimate inclusion of all charitable and penal institutions; (3) Protests that many Eugene families are having to move out because they can not pay the higher rents; (4) Protests that many children will have to remain home from school this fall unless clothing is provided. The meeting is called for 8 p. m. at 382 Eighth avenue west.

The secretary of the All Workers union in the meeting notice alleges bean pickers must go to work at 7 a. m., take a half-hour off for lunch and work until 5 p. m., and are forced to stay in the fields at all times. They claim they can not leave the fields without permission from the bosses, even though the work is piece work. They also make complaints on the wages and about work on Sundays.

Bean growers emphatically deny any unfairness. They say wages here were fixed in agreement with C. H. Gram, state commissioner of labor, and that the wages here are five cents higher a hundred than the minimum set by Mr. Gram. Al growers contacted here declared they were paying 90 cents a hundred, holding out 10 cents a hundred until the end of the season. A statement from Mr. Gram received Monday from Salem by the Register-Guard said:

"The minimum wage for bean pickers for 1935 has been set at 85 cents per hundred pounds, but the grower is permitted to hold out 10 cents per hundred as a bonus to the picker if he works through the entire season."

James Gardens, Truman Chase, Sam Cummins, and E. L. Cox were the growers contacted here. All said they were paying the 90 cents a hundred, holding out the 10 cents as permitted until the end of the season. All stated they alowed one hour for lunch, pointing out that an some days it ran a trifle over that. The growers pointed out that when beans had to be picked, they were picked, and work on Sundays and holidays is allowed in these emergencies. Very few fields here pick on Sundays, but they have notices up to the effect that there will be work on Sundays and holidays when necessary. They all stated there were no regulations prohibiting workers from leaving the fields when necessary. As to the signs in the fields referred to by the workers, these signs are those posted by order of the state welfare commission, the growers said, the signs giving the state regulations.

As to picking on holidays, Labor day usually is the only day coming under this subject, the growers stated. Since very few fields if any pick on Sundays, unless work is done on Labor day, which is Monday, the beans remain too long on the vines.

Most of the fields contacted have their starting time at 8 a. m., but those who want to come earlier can do so in some fields. The fields contacted said the pickers knew what regulations there were when they started work.

The state rule requires that should the grower elect to hold out the 10 cents a hundred until the end of the season to insure that his workers remain until the crop is harvested, he must post a notice to that effect. Mr. Gram states that ony when a picker should quit voluntarily could he be deprived of the bonus, but that if he should be "fired" he would still be entitled to the extra 10 cents.

As to the second complaint, that against Governor Martin, the secretary of the workers group said they would protest if such sterilization were made general for those on relief.

The matters of the high rents and the lack of clothing for the school children will be discussed thoroughly and some effort made to get help to these families.

SNAPSHOT HINTS FOR AMATEUR CONTESTANTS

Clouds add much to the beauty of the sky. Include them in every picture.

IT seems that too often we forget all about the fleecy white clouds, which add so much to the attractiveness and beauty of a snapshot. The average amateur will put forth great effort to secure sharpness, contrast and good composition in his ground subject and then completely overlook the possibilities of beautiful cloud effects.

One thing that really adds to the interest in a landscape picture is clouds. Suppose we are taking such a picture and use a film which responds only to ultra-violet, violet, and blue light. We should not be able to distinguish between the clouds and sky if we give enough exposure to show detail in the landscape. This is because the light from the blue sky and the white clouds is very rich in light rays to which the film responds.

Although clouds and blue sky are both rich in ultra-violet, violet and blue, there is a marked difference between the two. The lights from the clouds, being white, actually contain, however, a lot of green and red light, while that from the blue sky does not.

This then, suggests a way to effectively show clouds and sky in a snapshot. We must use a film which will respond to green, or to green and red light, and put over the lens a filter which does not let through the ultra-violet, violet and blue. The green or green and red light from the clouds will thus affect the film, while practically no light from the sky will get through to it, and in the finished print, the clouds will appear whiter than the sky.

Some film is sensitive to green light only but supersensitive panchromatic film will respond to both green and red light. All these films will, therefore, show up the clouds against the sky if used with a yellow filter.

From time to time you have perhaps heard of "filter factors." Here's what it means. Since the filter cuts out some of the light which would otherwise affect the film, a longer exposure must be given. The amount by which the exposure must be increased is known as the "factor" of the filter. It is noted by the number of times the exposure must be increased when using a color filter, as compared with the exposure without one.

The deeper the yellow color in the filter the more violet and blue it removes, or "holds back." The greater the "factor" the more the exposure must be increased.

As you will no doubt surmise, there are various types of filters and each type has its limitations. In choosing a filter you must make your own decision based on your general requirements.

If you do not want to seriously consider filter "factors" there is a filter known as a sky filter used extensively by amateurs to photograph clouds in a landscape with no increase in exposure-time. Half of this filter is yellow and the other half clear. The sky is photographed through the yellow part while the landscape, or general subject, is photographed through the clear lower half.

Robinson Flings Answer to Hoover Speech Challenge

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—(AP)—Amid disagreement whether Herbert Hoover seeks presidential nomination, Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, answered the former president's challenge to the New Deal today with a declaration that one administration aim is "to overcome the drastic effects of Hoover policies."

The Hoover statement, saying President Roosevelt should reveal "what changes this administration proposes in the constitution" before congress adjourns, was a major topic among the legislators.

Some Republicans agreed with Robinson it showed the ex-president was a candidate for another term, but Representative Treadway, (R., Mass.) commented "half the people are against the New Deal, and they aren't all candidates."

"Roosevelt objectives have been clear from the beginning," said Robinson. "One has been to overcome the drastic effects of Hoover policies; another, to improve permanently living conditions and opportunities for the people generally."
