tion picture entertainment in the club building at 7:30 o'clock. A home economics demonstration was held during the afternoon Thursday from 1 to 3 o'clock and at 3 o'clock the home economics judging contest was scheduled.

Miss Michael Champion
In the judging Thursday morning, Helen Michael, Eugene Route 1, was announced a champion in clothing division number three and Muriel Dave, Eugene Route 1, was declared champion in home making in the linen and cotton divisions. Awards for champions and other winners were to be announced later, according to R. C. Kuehner, county agent in charge of the fair. Miss Michael also won championship in room improvement.

Scoring 90 points out of a possible 100, Earl Eastburn, 12, Walker, was rated highest in the first of the health examinations held Thursday morning. Examinations were conducted by the Lane county health unit with Dr. R. C. Romig, county health officer, making the examinations. Points are scored on general condition, posture, body, head and throat, legs and feet and self-control.

Model Farm Buildings Attract
An exhibit of model farm buildings, built by members of the 4-H club Builders' Club at Santa Clara attracted considerable interest in the main exhibit building Thursday. A chicken house and dairy house, built to scale on plans for model buildings prepared by the Oregon State College, were displayed.

Each year Nathan and William David Beers, of school district 108, on Indian creek in the coast section, send in bunches of gladioli to decorate the main building and the exhibit arrived as usual this year, the large bunches of beautiful flowers, grown by the two boys, occupying a prominent space in the flower exhibit.

Judges for the exhibits are Helen Cowgill, home economics; Ben Rodenwald, livestock and John Billings, handicraft and forestry, all of Oregon State college; and Elmo Chase, Eugene, flowers and gardening.

ROGERS FUNERAL RITES ATTENDED BY MULTITUDES

Shortly after the gates opened at 7 a. m., nearly 30,000 persons had congregated at the park.

Casket is Not Opened Hurried along by officers, the mourners filed by the body at the rate of nearly 100 a minute. The line of march was kept several feet from the bier. Those who had flowers gave them to attendants, who went and placed them at the base of the catafalque. The question of whether Rogers' casket should be open was left to his widow. She decided against it last night.

Among those bidden to the private services this afternoon were Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant and Commander Herbert A. Jones, representing President Roosevelt.

Bowl and Church Filled
The huge Hollywood bowl, seating 65,000, and the Community Presbyterian church of Beverly Hills were meeting places for the general public. At the motion picture studios, including the one at which Rogers was a star, fellow film players joined in paying him homage.

riam asking a minute of silence throughout California at 2 p. m., the time of the services, was followed by city and federal offices and most business houses here, with flags at half-staff throughout the day.
Services at Claremore, Too
Simultaneously Claremore, Okla., which Rogers called his "home town" was holding memorial services and at nearby Chelsea, the Rev. Argus J. Hamilton, classmate of the humorist, was to deliver a eulogy.

Motion picture producers and distributors of America previously had announced that more than 12,000 theaters over the country would be darkened for two minutes during the services. The variety club of Minneapolis and St. Paul honored Rogers with a theater program and in Des Moines, and Ames, Ia., carillons tolled, while at the Iowa state fair a silent tribute was paid.

At the request of the family private funeral services at the Wee Kirk of the Heather at the park were kept brief and simple.

At these services the Rev. J. Whitcomb Broucher, associate pastor of the Glendale Baptist church and intimate friend of Rogers, was to read the funeral oration, and John Boles, motion picture star and singer at the same studio where the comedian worked, was to sing.

The service, according to Mrs. Rogers' wish, was timed to last little more than 20 minutes.

At Rogers' home studio, Twentieth Century-Fox, where his name for years topped film matriculations shown throughout the English-speaking world, George Jessel, New York stage star and friend of the comedian for 25 years, delivered a brief eulogy.

In the Hollywood bowl, Lawrence Tibbett, sang John Masfield's "By a Bier Side"; Conrad Nagel, actor friend of Rogers long before the advent of talking pictures, read a prose selection, and Rupert Hughes, the writer, read the eulogy.

New York's statute books contain many don'ts. Among these are statutes prohibiting riding a bicycle with hands off the handlebars, flying kites in city streets, and firing a cannon in the city except with the mayor's permission, the cannon to be no larger than a four-pounder.

POST'S FUNERAL STATE CEREMONY dozen women fainted, and two nurses were assigned to care for them. National guardsmen managed the throng with difficulty.

At noon, while thousands still awaited an opportunity for a last look at the flier's face, the state's official observance began. Governor Marland, accompanied by Brig. Gen.

H. W. Butner of Fort Sill, representing President Roosevelt, marched through a forced lane to the second floor spot where the body lay.

"Wiley Post has come to rest," the governor said, his deep voice raised above the murmur of the crowd. "The body of Oklahoma's son begins the sleep eternal beneath the sod he loved. His spirit in company with the spirit of Oklahoma's Will Rogers, his pal, takes its flight to that bourne from which no traveler ever returns.

"Wiley Post ascended above the earth to heights thought unattainable by man. Today Wiley Post precedes us, his friends, on that greater journey we all must take some day. . . ."

Funeral rites were in the First Baptist church after which the remains were taken to the cemetery.
