DICTATORS MAKE A TRUCE

If the agreement by which Hitlerized Germany agrees to a hands-off policy in Mussolinized Austria is an omen of peace...

The agreement to stop pestering Austria with German Nazi propaganda is probably the "trade-off" for the latest Nazi push to take the Free City of Danzig out from under the jurisdiction of the despised League of Nations...

In any case, the understanding is one by which each side has something to gain for the moment and very little in the ultimate to lose.

On the shifting sands of opportunism the game of European politics is played. Because it renounces all idealism, European policy is often called realism...

We owe no apologies to Europe for keeping resolutely away.

SOUTHERN OREGON IN REVOLT.

REPORTS from Roseburg, Grants Pass and other communities in Southern Oregon indicate revolt from the state milk board's recent decree raising the retail prices on milk and making price and practices uniform throughout the state.

Milk supply must be viewed as a public utility in respect to its direct connection with public health. For that reason it is reasonable to require the elimination of cut-throat practices which may affect the quality of milk.

But to say that prices and practices must be the same at all times over a state as large as Oregon and with as many varying conditions for dairying is so ridiculous as to invite distrust.

NO LONGER 'LUCKY'

CHARLES LUCIANO, for years known in the New York underworld as "Lucky Luciano," has lived to learn that his luck can change.

The verdict of the jury is a telling blow at underworld power, but even more significant is the rejuvenation of a nation-wide war on racketeers.

And well they may, for it indicates that the job of cleaning out the racketeers is not impossible, after all.

There is still some debate as to whether that "nose thumping" by the Danzig delegate at the League of Nations the other day was a gesture of contempt or just the regular Nazi salute.

This is the restful season even in politics. The spirits of George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Thomas Jefferson can get a nap till fall when they must expect to be freely evoked.

The drought has played hob with the grain crops in the Middle West but apparently the New Dealers still hope to save that section's large crop of votes.

It is a good time to start laying in the winter's wood, says the Provident Soul, but with the fishing at its best, why bring that up?

An optimist is a chap who hails a new set of Hitler promises as a token of peace.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

TEACHERS CONTRACTS

JUST why teachers should be subject to the only contracts school boards work out for them, we have never been able to figure out unless it is because the supply is greater than the demand...

It is an agreement required in a small town in North Carolina and is as follows:

"I promise to take a vital interest in all phases of Sunday school work, donating of my time, service and money without stint, for the benefit and uplift of the community.

"I promise to abstain from all dancing, immodest dressing and any other conduct unbecoming a teacher and a lady.

"I promise not to go out with any young man, except in so far as it may be necessary to stimulate Sunday school work.

"I promise not to fall in love, to become engaged or secretly married.

"I promise to remain in the dormitory, or on the school grounds, when not actively engaged in school or church work elsewhere.

"I promise not to encourage or tolerate the least familiarity on the part of any of my boy pupils.

"I promise to sleep at least eight hours each night, to eat carefully, to take every precaution to keep in the best of health and spirits, in order that I may better be able to render efficient service to my pupils."

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER Register-Guard Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON, July 12.—This presidential campaign is very far from being a cut and dried one.

It is complicated by a large array of side issues and separated by related factors. Their effect on the result can at this stage be only a matter of guesswork.

A third party ticket usually is enough by itself to stir up plenty of speculation as to the possibility that it will defeat the major party candidate who otherwise would win or that it might even throw the election into the House of Representatives by preventing either old party from getting a majority of electoral votes.

But there are other things than the Lemke-Coughlin Union party to think about.

The threat of trouble in the steel industry as a result of the attempt of John L. Lewis and his allies to organize the steel workers is one.

The alliance between Roosevelt and Lewis and between Lewis and the Democratic machine in Pennsylvania must be borne in mind, plus the fact that the administration is committed to the principle of organization for collective bargaining which the steel corporations bitterly oppose.

Only subsequent developments in the steel situation can reveal the political effect, but of the close interrelationship with politics there can be no doubt.

LABOR IN THICK OF FIGHT

Labor organizations, furthermore, will be officially involved in partisan politics to an extraordinary degree. The Committee for Industrial Organization unions are for Roosevelt and it seems likely other A. F. of L. leaders will declare for him this fall.

Questions yet to be answered are whether the leaders can deliver the members; whether, in case they do, the vast majority of workers, unorganized, will follow along; and whether labor political solidarity will cause other groups, such as middle-class citizens and farmers, to be come antagonistic and move toward the London camp.

Closely allied with these questions is the issue raised by Roosevelt which his enemies call the "class" issue. The president's attack on economic oligarchies and concentrations of wealth and control may be widely construed as a radical attack on business and industry in general.

But, in any event, it has been some time since "big business" has been so directly attacked in a campaign.

DROUGHT ANOTHER FACTOR

The drought is another campaign visitation, whose possible effect on the election politicians are seeking to gauge. Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican national committee has leaped to the guns with statements that any administration would relieve drought sufferers, that Democrats will gain no votes through their relief efforts, and that the administration's AAA programs will be responsible for any food shortage that develops.

The New Deal continues to spend large sums of money and to be responsible for the livelihood of millions. Other millions have benefited and will continue to benefit between now and election time from the spending and lending programs.

Here again is a new factor in political campaigns. Although at first glance it might seem certain to make votes for Roosevelt, there will be an offset vote from those who violently oppose the expenditures, who resent the extent to which money has been given to the needy, or who believe there has been great waste.

Nobody can figure out yet the respective strength of these two voting elements.

OTHER VITAL QUESTIONS

Other unguessables include the extent to which Jim Farley will be able to straighten out inter-party fights. The Tammany leadership in New York is at odds with the administration and victory or defeat in New York state may depend on whether Tammany delivers its full strength vote for Roosevelt in November.

Still another temporary enigma is the question of how Governor Landon's personality, radio voice, and position on issues will "take" with the voters.

On that question, also, you can hear two extremes of opinion and you will just have to wait and see. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

MANY years have passed since the medical profession recognized the importance of the removal of infected tonsils, because of their relationship to disease.

Tonsils sometimes are removed simply because they are so greatly enlarged as to interfere with swallowing and breathing. In many instances, however, they are found to be filled with infectious material, and for that reason constitute a menace to health and life.

The infection may be carried from the tonsils by the blood to other parts of the body, and there set up secondary infections.

There are well-established cases in which infection of the tonsils has been followed by that of the heart, of the kidneys, and even of the lining of the abdominal cavity.

There also are cases which connect infection of the tonsils with chronic colds and sinus infections, infections of the ears, disturbances of the nervous system, and rheumatic disorders.

No one ever has determined just why we have tonsils. Apparently they serve some purpose in taking care of infectious germs that get into the throat.

COTTAGE GROVE, July 12.—(Special)—At an adjourned meeting of the city council Friday night, the city attorney was instructed to draft an ordinance for a special election to be held at a later date for the purpose of voting on a 10-year franchise for the Mountain States Power company.
