

IMMORAL CONDUCT CHARGES FEATURE MARY ASTOR CASE

LOS ANGELES, July 28.—(AP)—Broken wide open by questions about alleged immorality and the story of a bathroom brawl, the court battle of red-haired Mary Astor, movie beauty, to regain custody of her baby...

Charges Coerced In her complaint, Miss Astor has charged that she was coerced into giving Dr. Thorpe an unconsented divorce when he threatened to "scandalize" her publicly.

The attorney, Roland Rich Woolley, began digging into the story of Dr. Thorpe's relations with other women in the months after the divorce last year.

He asked about temporary nurses the father said he employed for the baby when her regular nurse was having her day out, and wanted to know "if, on frequent occasions, they didn't stay in the house overnight?"

Martyr to BLACKHEADS PIMPLES For over 20 years

Read this remarkable, grateful tribute: "I suffered for at least 20 years with blackheads and pimples of external origin. The pimples were large, irritating, and caused many embarrassing days. I tried many salves and soaps, but none gave relief. Then I bought Cuticura and after using only one-half a box of Cuticura Ointment along with Cuticura Soap, my skin was clear again."

Midwest "Disappointed." Governor Horner said the Midwest was "frankly disappointed" by the initial campaign speech of a man pictured as "a strong, silent man." "We found that he was, indeed, a 'strong, silent man,'" Horner said, "silent on the true issues of the campaign and even more silent as to the policies he intended to carry out."

Peltier's, Kaho's Comets First Since 1910 to Be Seen with Naked Eye; First Comets Appearing at Once Since 1852

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Editor) BOSTON, July 28.—(AP)—Peltier's comet, approaching the earth at a rate of 25 miles per second, and Kaho's comet, now retreating into space, are the first such heavenly bodies visible to the naked eye since 1910.

They are the first comets to appear simultaneously since 1852. That year two celestial wanderers were seen only 2,000,000 miles apart. The current heavenly visitors have stirred interest in previous comets. Two were visible to the naked eye in 1910. One was the January or Johannesburg comet which did not attract much attention.

Named for Pupil Halley's comet is named for a pupil of Newton's who made a sensational prediction when it first appeared. He forecast its return and it actually was seen within a month of the predicted date. That difference was accounted for by its passage close to Jupiter and Saturn.

In 1852 it reappeared within two or three days of the calculated time, and is due to return in 1985, allowing 75 years for the swing around its elliptical orbit. The idea that heads of comets are loose collections of stones and bits of metal received much confirmation from the visible breakup of a famous comet discovered just 110 years ago. This was Biela's comet, first seen in 1826 by an Austrian officer who

GREAT LAKES SCOW SINKS; 15 DROWNED

CHICAGO, July 28.—(AP)—Fifteen members of a crew of 22 men were believed drowned early today when the lake-river barge "Material Service," carrying 2500 tons of gravel, ran into choppy water as it made for Calumet harbor, listed suddenly and sank in Lake Michigan. Seven of the crew were rescued, but Capt. Charles D. Brown of Port Huron, Mich., was presumed to have died with the 14 others.

The tragedy occurred as the vessel was traveling from Lockport, where the Chicago river and into the choppy lake. Had the boat gone half a mile farther it would have reached the calm waters of the harbor. "It all happened too quickly to say what caused it," first mate John M. Johnson, 44, of Chicago, told me of the company leader, the boat was in the pilot house. I probably listed, then suddenly started to list with a jerk and then tipped over the deck where all fell overboard. Water was pouring over the deck and I saw men thrown overboard as the boat began to list.

Army Guards Identity of Bravest Clothes Horse Like War Secrets, But at Least he Should Get D. S. C.

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN (United Press Staff Correspondent) WASHINGTON, July 28.—(AP)—There is a brave man in the army today: a hero with chin up and stomach in, who acts—yes—he is forced to act as a fashion model for the fall and winter styles of 1933.

This unhappy man pinettes with a wan smile while tailors fuss around him with pins and the department of war ponders the flare of his coat. He strolls dejectedly down the floor with hand in pocket and even with hand on hip as the staff generals consider the hang of his pants, the beauty of his gold braid and the artistry of his brass buttons.

He, poor devil, is the victim of the army's decision to show the nation something fancy in the way of full dress uniforms, which soldiers have not worn since the world war. Not "Up To Snuff" For the past 19 years an army officer hasn't had to dress up for anything, not even a shindig at the White House. All he's done has been wash his hands and put on the same olive drab suit he wore all day. This has given the army an inferiority complex and a down-at-the-heels feeling.

To date he has modeled a dozen or so uniforms, the brain-children of the country's leading military tailors. None of these has caught the eye of Gen. Craig; they're too splendid. What he wants for his soldiers is a nice, dark blue suit, neat, but not too gaudy; a uniform which will make the army throw out its chest and look proud when it says: "May I have this dance?"

Problem Is Serious The clothes problem is a serious one. The new suit must not cost more than $75 retail. It must not look like the get-up of a comic opera suitor. Neither can it have a funeral aspect. It must combine a spirit of gaiety and an air of dignity—and that's why our hero is sweating, probably this very minute. He takes off suits and puts 'em on, with the speed of a Parisian mannequin. He struts and he stalks; he crouches and he bends. He mops his brow when gets the chance, and suffers silently.

He goes home at night, all tired out. His wife asks him what's the matter and at last our hero's bravery plays out on him. He cannot tell the truth. It is too much. So he says: "Another tough day at the war department, darling, and where are my overalls? I want to go down in the cellar and rest."

MRS. MOODY QUILTS RACQUET FOR GOOD SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—(AP)—Helen Wills Moody, considered the greatest of woman tennis players, stepped today from the international spotlight she held for a decade and turned her full attention to a career as a fashion designer.

The San Francisco matron, now 31, said she had definitely given up plans to play in the national championships in New York next month and indicated she was through with major competition. "I shall play only in tournaments which fit in with my work as a designer," she said. "I find it impossible to do designing and tennis, and justice to both."

Mrs. Moody learned tennis by playing against her father and was coached later by William G. "Pop" Fuller, veteran Berkeley, Calif., instructor. She won her first national title in 1923, breaking the streak of Molla Bjurstedt Mallory; retained the crown in 1924 and 1925.

An operation kept her from competition in 1926, but she returned the next year to regain her place as "Queen Helen" until 1933 when, behind in the national finals at Forest Hills, she walked off the court and defied to Helen Hull Jacobs, her keenest rival.

After this default, Mrs. Moody was treated for months for an injured vertebra. She recovered to again enter the 1935 English championship and climax her career with a sensational victory over Miss Jacobs.

Heating Project Grant Approved The application to PWA for grant of $9450 to complete the heating project on the University of Oregon campus has been approved, according to a telegram received late Tuesday from Congressman James W. Mott. This grant does not alter the total cost figure of $21,000 originally set for the project, but completes the total grant. Contracts will be let soon, it is announced. This is one of the major PWA projects under way in the city.

Stories in STAMPS

INVENTOR OF THE AIR PUMP OTTO VON GUERICKE, mayor of Magdeburg, Germany, was dabbling in science, some 300 years ago, when he discovered the principle of the air pump. Elated, he built two copper hemispheres, each about a foot in diameter, and smoothed their edges so that they fitted snugly together.

To one he attached his strange pump; to the other a petcock which would permit entry of air, when the two hemispheres were placed together. Harnessed to a ring at the poll of each sphere were two powerful horses. Before an audience that included the Emperor of Germany, Ferdinand III, Von Guericke placed the hemispheres together and pumped. The joint tightened. Then he started the teams pulling against each other, but the two-part sphere held tight. The pump had withdrawn air from the sphere, so that the stronger outside air pressure was enough to keep the hemispheres together against the pull of the horses.

Von Guericke's "Magdeburg Hemispheres" started scientists on a new series of important discoveries. Today this scientist is remembered by a stamp that Germany has issued on the 50th anniversary of his death.

TOWNSENDISM EYES LABOR'S COURTSHIP

Decrying a third party Nelson warned that "if Dr. Townsend does not destroy his own organization in his drive for a new political party, the racketeers within it will sooner or later tear it to pieces in their quarreling about the division of the money that comes in."

"When Dr. Townsend began several months ago to use the money and power that we have given him, to build a political party around men who are not in sympathy with the purpose for which the Townsend movement was started, he abandoned his own plan. We who came into the movement for the single purpose of assisting an effort to develop a sound old age pension system in our country, cannot consistently follow Dr. Townsend or give any further support to his organization now that he is trying to lead us into a camp in which our pension plan is shoved into the background, if not entirely discarded."

Calling Nelson "a strong-minded, stubborn cuss," Dr. Shaddock said he would not let him speak for one Townsend platform again "the way he feels now."

Nelson demanded democratization of the pension movement with control in the hands of the citizen maximum, who would be a national board of directors. Dr. Townsend has sole control now, he said.
