"SOCIETY" LOSES CASTE

ONE of the interesting little developments of the last decade has been the decline and slow death of Society, spelled with a capital S.

All this somehow is called to mind by a recent dispatch from Newport, R. I., to the effect that John Jacob Astor has induced his father-in-law, Francis O. French, to cancel publication of a book "which dealt with society for what it is."

Father-in-law, apparently, had been moved to debunk the distinguished milieu in which he lives, moves, and has his being.

What Society did and thought and felt was important, or seemed so, in those days.

But a great many things have happened since then. Young matrons have put their distinguished names into paid advertisements, certifying that they rest their patrician frames on So-and-So's mattresses, or smear their faces with Whoozis's cold cream, or serve Tastee-Beans coffee at the feasts.

Older matrons have married prize fighters and gigolos. Their squires have gone shame-faced into court at the beckoning of chorus girls, beauty contest winners, and opera singers.

And that is about all that Society has done. It has not furnished us with our leaders in government, industry, the arts, or the army and the navy.

It has not set the tone for the social and intellectual life of the country, as has the upper class in Europe. It has not, in short, done anything at all to recompense the country for the expense of supporting it.

IDEA FOR LOCAL POLICE

J. EDGAR HOOVER leaned back in his chair the other day and enumerated the rigid qualifications necessary to become a G-man.

They include, among other things, a legal education, splendid physical condition, a stainless past with no arrests, a good credit rating, and a generally well-rounded personal development.

And even after an applicant turns up with all these qualifications, he still must spend three months in supervised training before he's ready to take the final test.

Here, in a scrupulously trained personnel, rests the success of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. That is something a great many local police executives might consider.

NEW ATTACK ON WAR PROFITS

SOCIALIST Premier Leon Blum of France believes that munition makers sow the seeds of war, and so Monsieur Blum is going ahead with a drastic program to "take the profits out of war."

It is a step that the world will watch intently. America, for instance, should be particularly interested because members of the United States Senate committee investigating the munitions industry concluded their labors with similar recommendations.

In America, of course, the proposal to render war profitless hasn't taken hold firmly enough as yet to result in action.

WAY TO FORESTALL CRIME

ORGANIZATION of the National Crime Prevention Institute, under Dr. Sheldon Glueck, professor of criminology in the Harvard law school, looks like another helpful step in the nation's war on lawlessness.

This agency, reports Dr. Glueck, hopes to coordinate the crime prevention activities of city, state, and nation, to fill important gaps in the existing anti-crime battle line, and to provide a clearing house, as it were, for crime prevention information.

Quite logically this new program is going to start with the public schools. For here, Dr. Glueck points out, lies the first approach to the whole problem.

Italy lately, until we realized that since Mussolini fired the three Ducos from the cabinet, they probably aren't talking.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER Register-Guard Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—This is the GHQ of the great effort of John L. Lewis and his followers to organize the five-billion-dollar steel industry.

It is also the seat of an sympathetic government as ever watched a major industrial conflict develop in America.

If you want to follow the Battle of Steel blow by blow, you will have to train your telescope on Washington as often as you turn it to the actual firing line.

You will have to watch the quarters of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the handsome offices of Lewis and the powerful United Mine Workers two blocks away, and the American Federation of Labor building, where an executive council has pondered whether it dared suspend any or all the 12 C. I. O. unions, with their 1,250,000 membership.

And you will have to watch the White House and half a dozen federal agencies where what happens to the C. I. O. in its struggles with both the steel corporations and the A. F. of L. craft unions is a matter of intense concern.

Steel is the industry on which our machine civilization rests. It is the most powerful foe of organized labor. Its defeat would bring labor victories in all mass production industries—and probably a turn in history.

Not only does the C. I. O. drive in steel and other industries tie in closely with the political campaign; success of this demand by labor for an economic and political voice may influence the trend of events for decades.

Already it is common talk that the C. I. O., if it lives, will be the nucleus for a strong labor or farmer-party in 1940.

For this year, however, there is a close alliance between John Lewis and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Lewis sat in at the White House on the Democratic platform plank for labor.

In Washington and in Pennsylvania, Lewis, who is nobody's humble lieutenant, is using the Democratic politicians. And they are using him. New Deal strategists think they have a fine chance in Pennsylvania.

Steel, pitching the key for Big Business in its relations with labor, is the outstanding target of those who would translate Roosevelt's attacks on "economic royalists" literally and specifically.

Nevertheless, Roosevelt wants no steel strike before November. Neither, apparently, does Lewis. There is some fear that the industry will precipitate hostilities, not only for political effect, but in the hope of strangling the organization drive in its infancy.

Nor does Roosevelt want to see a complete split between C. I. O. and the craft unions, for there is reason to fear that many right wingers in the labor movement might then turn against him.

The C. I. O. is the heart and soul of labor's Non-Partisan League, which, under George Berry, is now signing up central labor unions over the country to work for Roosevelt.

Now let's look around official Washington and get the idea why steel drive leaders expect both practical and psychological aid from the capital in days to come.

1.—The LaFollette Senate sub-committee, directed to investigate violations of civil liberties, labor espionage, and interference with the right to organize. This group will pay special attention to troubles in the steel industry and will try to expose the industry's anti-labor tactics.

2.—The National Labor Relations Board, whose duty is to enforce the Wagner act guaranteeing labor's right to organize and bargain collectively—an act which the steel industry defies.

3.—The Department of Labor, whose officials are sympathetic to the C. I. O. movement and who will vocally oppose tactics frequently used against labor organizers and union converts.

4.—The Department of Justice, now engaged in an investigation of collusive bidding by steel companies as well as monopoly in the industry. It is also charged with enforcing a new law which penalizes interstate transportation of strikebreakers.

5.—Harry Hopkins and the WPA—where from the beginning of FERA it has been held that strikers and their families were entitled to relief.

6.—Finally, Roosevelt. He could hardly back down from insisting on the guarantees of the Wagner act, any more than he could afford to refuse any fair request from Lewis when such refusal would depart from an attitude of benevolent neutrality.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and Hygeia, the Health Magazine

EVERY mother likes to feel that her child is superior to other children, not only in physique, but also in mentality.

When a mother looks at her child and tries to evaluate its qualities, she should remember that both she and her husband give to the child most of what it has in the way of qualities, and that each of the parents also is responsible for making the most of those that the child actually has.

Thus, heredity, environment, including education and personal attention of the parents are primarily responsible for making the child what it is.

Children frequently resemble their parents; almost as often they do not, in which case they are likely to resemble someone in the previous ancestry.

The fact that we are the sons and daughters of our parents is responsible for different types of individuals in the same family. This is the reason for the appearance of genius in commonplace families, and, occasionally, of idiots in brilliant families.

Nevertheless, in this, as in other matters the majority is inclined to rule, and the more brilliance there is in the ancestry, the more likelihood there is of the appearance of brilliance in the children.
