

ALLEN TELLS ADVENTURES IN LAND OF HITLER

NOTE: This is one of the articles written for this newspaper by Eric W. Allen, dean of the Oregon school of Journalism, who is now traveling in Europe on a scholarship granted by the Oberlin of the Karl Shurz memorial fund.

ERIC W. ALLEN, dean of the Oregon school of Journalism, is now traveling in Europe on a scholarship granted by the Oberlin of the Karl Shurz memorial fund.

was born in the Austrian empire, and has crossed twice the Atlantic. His father was a successful business man, and his mother was a social worker. Allen is now in Europe on a scholarship granted by the Oberlin of the Karl Shurz memorial fund.

sun comes out and gets too bright, and all this, together with our nine excellent meals, costs the three of us just two dollars a day apiece—just what the meals alone would cost in Portland.

The bedrooms are fitted up in typical German style. There are no blankets. All beds are wide single beds. There is on each a very fluffy silk-covered down quilt five inches thick—I just measured one—and the upper sheet overlaps this at top and bottom and is buttoned to it covering the reverse side for about a foot and a half at each end. Besides this there is a featherbed or bag of feathers (not quilted) a little over five feet square. It contains about two bushels of feathers. On each bed are two immense feather pillows three feet square or more. Usually there is also a wedge shaped bolster in Germany, but apparently not in Bavaria. The American tears his hair, wonders how this apparatus can be utilized to give a comfortable night's sleep. What could he do on a hot night? But then, perhaps there are no hot nights in Germany—we have not encountered any. The quilt-sheet combination is never tucked in at the bottom. How is this equipment used? A proud mother showed us her children asleep. They were rolled up like cocoons. Perhaps the art can be acquired in time.

The bedrooms are in other ways well equipped. Our larger room has six mirrors—two of them very large. In it are also two bed tables with bed-reading-lamps, a dressing table, a chest of drawers, a large wardrobe, (the European substitute for a closet), a big rack for towels and two more chairs. In the smaller room is all this plus another desk and easy chair. On former trips to Europe one put up with water brought to the room by a slave, but now running hot and cold water and good plumbing in every bedroom seems to be the rule. Private bathrooms, American style, are unusual and very expensive.

The European ideal of newer housing, both as we experience it, and as we observe the vast amount of rehousing and resettlement work carried out in the seventeen years since the war, largely by governmental initiative, appears to us to be high. A vast amount of rehousing, both urban and rural, was carried out by the democratic and socialist governments after the war, and now under the dictatorships in the various countries the subject is still a matter of wide public interest. The social democrats built large community dwellings; the present idea makes for the decentralization of industry—spreading factories into the country—and erecting separate cottages for workers where each can have a garden. They all seem very clean and neat and well kept. We have seen hundreds of developments of both kinds. But of this, more later. It is a complicated story; one should not jump to the conclusion that the general economic condition is good; the contrary is the fact.

UP-TO-DATE in every respect is Joe Richard's new clothing store on Willamette street which is well coming visitors after a complete remodeling. This night picture shows the brilliant new neon sign which marks the entrance.
