RADIO CRAMPS "ORATORY"

It is impossible to look back at the political campaign without reflecting on the tremendous change which the radio has wrought in American politics. And the tough part about it is that politics has not yet adjusted itself to the change.

First of all, the old-style orator was hopelessly crippled. What price, now, the booming voice, the impassioned gestures, the hoarse crescendo, the restless pacing of the platform?

The microphone wants a voice that is soft and well modulated, it has no use for gestures, and it absolutely bars lunging and pacing.

Nor is that all. The orator nowadays can never forget that the audience in front of him is only a thousandth part of his audience.

The radio has given our two great parties some knotty problems to solve. Solve it they must, if democratic government is to function properly.

LET'S MAKE IT COMPLETE

It is encouraging to note that officials in several states have been making determined efforts to wipe the Black Legion from the American scene.

A resolution is before Congress asking for an appropriation which would permit fighting the legion across state boundaries.

At the same time complete revelation of the activities of these raiders is highly important.

Having geared themselves to 55 per cent and arranged bond issues and other complicated arrangements on that basis, it would take them a long time to get the technicians rejiggered, even if they did.

DOWN TO PERSONALITIES

FROM now on, the presidential campaign is going to appear a great deal different. This is because the voters now have two figures to listen to.

There will be much talk, too, of platforms and issues and the future of America; but, in the final analysis, it's a good bet that the 1936 campaign will turn as have all others—on the men.

A Utah slayer, given his choice of death by hanging or shooting, has yet indicated no preference.

One exhibit at the Cleveland expo features the unique from the world over, but you look in vain for a candidate who said he might have trouble winning.

Adrian, Mich., farmers abandoned their annual picnic. They should have given it a try, anyway; it might have brought rain.

European women's clothes designer suggests that overheated American men twirl fans at baseball games. If it's all the same, could we use umpires?

A Massachusetts doctor has examined 2000 bits of skin under the spectroscope. It is wondered if the human guinea pig furnishes his own straight razor.

Maybe there's no connection, but social agencies warned girls not to come to New York, and 11 Duce shipped 400,000 gold diggers to Ethiopia.

A party of French scientists is seeking a tribe of Eskimos "hitherto untouched by civilization." But we thought all Eskimo tribes were peaceful.

A tiny "alarm clock" for the wrist was exhibited in Germany. It is just the thing to help the office worker wake up at quitting time.

It's getting so a timid entomologist doesn't open a paper, lest he find the police are on the trail in another butterfly murder.

A new film is "Born to Dance." If there is a sequel, it probably will deal with the subsequent generation and be titled, "Born to Pay the Piper."

There have been few campaign speeches so far, so Mother Nature must accept full blame for all that hot air.

Leon Blum's New Deal should be worthwhile, if its AAA buys Frenchmen for not planting underground forts.

In view of the drought, it appears now that the grass roots convention was called none too soon.

An Ohio gargantuan astronomer is agog over his discovery of a new comet. If he is absent-minded, some of his customers probably have been paying him the distance to it.

An Arkansas dog catcher resigned because of ridicule. Apparently he drew the line at dead cats.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

OUR SENIOR SENATOR

THE republicans of Oregon are staging a "horse and buggy picnic," (whatever that may be) today in honor of Senator McNary at the latter's home "Fire-corn" north of Salem.

Although Senator McNary is republican leader in the senate, and deserves party tribute, he is much more than that, for his 19 years of public service in behalf of Oregon at the national capital, have earned him the gratitude of all Oregonians.

Oregon is indeed fortunate in having such a representative at Washington where his influence is greater than any other republican senator with his own party and with the administration.

Old practices and procedures serve a good purpose but should always be subject to revision in a constantly changing world and Oregon's senior senator has always been a leader among liberals in discovering new methods to deal with a discredited system.

So Senator McNary does not belong exclusively to republicans—he belongs to all Oregonians.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER (Register-Guard Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Given another term, President Roosevelt doubtless would eventually make up his mind as to what kind of PWA program he wanted.

The battle between Mr. Ickes' boys and Mr. Hopkins' boys has been going on steadily for more than a year and it is importantly involved in the current peculiar situation, which finds Mr. Ickes sitting on $300,000,000 and not knowing what to do with it.

The latest mixup is due to Roosevelt's alarm over increase in the WPA rolls, which would be hard enough to cut in a campaign year anyway.

Heading toward the election, the president realizes that the increase in relief cost and evidence that available relief funds are likely to run out long before January will not be quite the best type of propaganda for the administration.

O. K. If It Worked Roosevelt's idea is that large numbers of WPA workers should be employed on PWA projects.

So far, the PWA program for this fiscal year hasn't even started, because of confusion over presidential regulations. Current understanding is that PWA can put money on its basis of 55 per cent loan and 45 per cent grant only if 45 per cent of the labor on the project can be taken from the relief rolls.

Ickes figures this would mean that the federal contribution would have to be cut to 10 or 15 per cent, since PWA projects require skilled labor for the most part, and doubts whether municipalities want to put up 55 or 60 per cent of the money themselves.

Meanwhile, it is understood that a confidential study of relative costs of WPA and PWA employment per man recently made by the Budget Bureau has put PWA in a very favorable light.

When the amount of local contribution and the labor indirectly employed in producing materials is figured in, it appears that PWA money employs far more men than indicated by figures previously given and furnished by WPA statisticians.

One complication likely to arise if the president sticks to his present ideas is a protest from labor organizations. Members of the building trades crafts unions, representing skilled labor, are likely to resent what seems to them an attempt to fill PWA jobs with unskilled labor.

Whatever happens, the admissions of Ickes at his recent press conference must seem extraordinary to anyone who has assumed that Roosevelt had long since straightened out WPA-PWA relations and respective programs.

Ickes frankly said he just didn't know what the president's plan was, "in the absence of any direct communication from him."

When someone remarked that a certain other phase of the situation "didn't make a damn bit of difference," Ickes interrupted and said: "That is how I feel about the whole business."

His top subordinates explained later that Ickes was bored. Some of them feared his remarks would appear to Roosevelt like "insubordination."

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

CATARACTS of the eyes develop in so many different ways, and are so confusing to the average person, that the condition has been exploited by quacks. Specialists in diseases of the eyes, however, are convinced that there is no cure for cataract by treatment with drops in the eye, or by any other easy method.

A cataract is any opacity of the lens of the eye or of its capsule. Obviously, this interferes with vision. Specialists classify cataracts according to the portion of the eye which is concerned; the consistency of the cataract, whether hard, soft or fluid; the extent of its development; whether partial, complete, stationary, or progressive; and finally, whether it is the kind of cataract that occurs in most old people as they get well along in years.

When cataracts develop in people under 35 years of age, the cataracts usually are soft. In older people, there develops a form known as senile cataract.

This is a degenerative condition, the cause of which is not known. It is quite common after 50 years of age, although occasionally it may be seen in younger people.

Both eyes almost always are involved when cataracts are present. Usually one develops before the other. Sometimes cataracts develop fully in a few months. In many cases years are required for complete development. In many instances a cataract will become stationary.

Doctors find that the correction of errors of refraction by the use of suitable eyeglasses is important for treatment in the incipient or early stages. Sometimes the sight can be improved by wearing smoked glasses, which aid in dilating the pupil of the eye, permitting more light to enter.

There are isolated instances in which cataracts have shown spontaneous improvement. There seems to be some evidence that a person's nutrition plays a considerable part in control of a developing cataract.

Sometimes people with cataract feel better if certain drops of local anesthetics, or similar substances, are placed in the eye at fairly frequent intervals. However, there does not seem to be any certainty that such method really helps.

Hence, anyone with a cataract should get immediate advice of a competent specialist in diseases of the eye. The physician will carefully watch the growth and development of the cataract and will, at the proper time, arrange for its removal.
