

LIONS HOSTS TO INTERNATIONAL HEAD WEDNESDAY

A triple plea to: (1) Extend the hand of help to the underprivileged young people of the country as one method to cut down crime; (2) to bring about a greater sense of moral responsibility in the nation and a greater appreciation of character building; and (3) to combat those forces that would break down the American ideal of democracy, was made by Edwin R. Kingsley, president of the Lions Club International, in an address given at the banquet honoring him Wednesday evening at the Eugene hotel. A crowd of more than 100 attended the meeting for which the Eugene Lions club was host. This is the first time in the history of the local club that the international president has visited. Mr. Kingsley's home is in Parkersburg, W. Va. Mrs. Kingsley is accompanying him on the trip of visitations to the Lions clubs of the country.

Urges Character Building
Mr. Kingsley in his address hit at those who shift the responsibility of character building and moral sense to the churches and schools. It must begin in the home, he told the club. "Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts are fine, but generally they are for the uptown boys and girls. Remember those across the railroad tracks. They need the help. The greatest percentage among our criminals come from their ranks," he told the club. How can the churches do more than they are when 50 per cent of our population has no church preference or membership and when the country is so flooded with the pulp magazines that are so unreadable they can not go through the mails? he asked the club. He pointed out that not enough time and place are given character building in our educational system and urged that the citizenry look for more support is given the emphasis for character building.

International goodwill was also stressed by Mr. Kingsley. With its inspirations of steadfastness, idealism, democracy, self-sacrifice, fidelity and service, the Lions organization can go a long way in making our world a better place, he told his listeners. Service clubs are fine for their friendships and the spirit of fellowship, but they must have activities and they must look to the spiritual side of life, he pointed out. The international head said he found increasing enthusiasm and interest in his organization. The Lions organization today has 2753 clubs in the United States with a membership of 90,000 and extends to seven other countries of the world.

Mr. Kletzing Here
Ralph Kletzing, Salem, president of the Oregon Lions club, introduced the international visitor, Harold W. White, a vice-president of the Eugene club, presided at the meeting. Dr. Harry W. Titus, William Russell, and Merle Chase were the program committee for the meeting.

Hal Young, tenor, instructor of voice at the University of Oregon, sang a group of solos, accompanied by Robert Gerrattson; and Louis Graziano played accordion music.

Mayor Eliza Large welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley for the city and James A. Rodman, member of the local Lions club, welcomed the visitors as president of the Eugene chamber of commerce. Special guests introduced were: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kletzing of Salem; Mayor and Mrs. Eliza Large; Paul D. Green, president of the Eugene Rotary club, and Mrs. Green; William Bartle, president of the Eugene Kiwanis club, and Mrs. Bartle; Al Brandt, president of the Active club, and Mrs. Brandt. Several other clubs were represented, 14 coming from Junction City, four from Corvallis, one from Walla Walla, Wash., two from Salem, two from Springfield, Sheriff A. O. Burk of Marion county, member of the Salem Lions club, was the "tail-walker" for the meeting. L. L. Ray from the local club made the presentation giving Mr. Kingsley a tinted scene of Lane county's coast line near Hecla Head. Decorations for the meeting were arranged by Chase Gardens.

EDWIN R. KINGSLEY, above, president of the Lions Clubs International, was a visitor in Eugene over Wednesday night and Thursday as guest of the Eugene Lions. His home is in Parkersburg, West Virginia.

SOCIAL SECURITY HEAD WILL SPEAK AT 'CITIES' MEET

John J. Winant, chairman of the National Social Security board, will be the featured speaker at the annual Commonwealth conference and the League of Oregon Cities annual convention, to be held at the University of Oregon, March 15 and 16. It was announced here today by Herman Kephil, director of the bureau of municipal research and executive secretary of the league.

Mr. Winant, who has been prominently mentioned as head of the proposed national department of public welfare, will deliver the conference banquet address and will also participate in discussions of the social security act and its administration.

Since the social security board was organized in October, 1935, Mr. Winant has served as its chairman except for a brief period during the presidential campaign when he resigned to defend the social security act from attacks made upon it by Governor Landon. He was reappointed to the board immediately after the election.

Governor of New Hampshire
Before taking over his present duties, Mr. Winant served as governor of New Hampshire for three terms and was the first governor to be re-elected in that state in eighty years. In 1934 Mr. Winant served as chairman of the president's textile inquiry board and in 1935 was appointed an assistant director of the International labor office in Geneva. During the war, Mr. Winant commanded the First Aerial Squadron working up from enlistment as a private. His visit to the university will be his first to the Pacific Northwest.

The Commonwealth conference this year will bring leading citizens from all over the state and is expected to be the most interesting and successful session since the meeting here started several years ago.

TIMBER TAX BODY TURNS IN REPORT

SALEM, Jan. 21.—(Special)—Recommendations to put forest production on a sustained yield basis were made Wednesday by the special committee on timber taxation in its report to Governor Martin.

The committee stressed the necessity for revising tax laws relating to forest lands, and summarized the following recommendations:

1. More efficient local government.
2. State assessment of timber lands be substituted for existing local assessments.
3. Legislation for a plan of state acquisition and disposition of tax-foreclosed lands.

Admitting that this program was also applicable to all real property, the committee declared that the timber problem was allied with general property issues.

The necessity of maintaining economic stability in lumber production drew the remark that "it is necessary to so manage the forest lands that the yield will be continuous, that men will have steady employment, and local government a stable source of revenue." In recent years, the committee added, forest depletion in the northwest has been more than double the annual growth.

Percentages of rural land ownership revealed that the federal government owns 53.35 per cent, the state 17.4, county 2.88, and private, 41.94. Oregon now has 28 per cent of the nation's standing timber, according to the report. Of this, 219,762,000,000 board feet belonged to the public, and 173,222,000,000 to private interests.

The committee defended the reforestation law, saying, "the reforestation law is basically sound."

During the first eight months of the current year, Soviet air lines carried more than 112,000 passengers.
