

Wheat Takes Another Plunge Here

85 CENTS BUSHEL
PRICE QUOTED IN EUGENE MONDAY

Local wheat took another plunge Monday, the price being quoted at 85 cents a bushel as compared to 86 cents on Saturday.

Local watermelons are being brought into the market and the growers are getting two cents a pound for them.

Raspberries were higher, the buying price being raised the past few days from $1.50 and $1.75 a crate to $2 a crate.

All other produce prices were unchanged Monday. The local price list follows:

PORTLAND BUTTER
QUOTATIONS SAME

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 13. (UPI)—Local butter trade was unchanged as to prices at the week's opening, all grades held at the same levels as at the close of the past week but 1/2 cent lower than last Monday. Trade was fairly light with receipts about meeting the demand.

Local cheese was unchanged and about steady. Quality corn was scarce and prices advanced about 10c on five dozen lots of genuine yellow bantam.

The local peach market was steady to firm with improved quality and a few crates dominating the market. J. H. Hale lots became more limited and a sharp reduction in receipts was expected. Some muskies were offered.

Strength shown in the local cantaloupe market at close of the week, was apparent again Monday with prices generally around $1.85.

Aside from a slight decline in beets and turnips, most lines of vegetables were unchanged.

Local poultry market was reported unusually active and turkey was in good call.
