It was announced here today by Miss Mozelles Hair, in charge of these classes for the coming year. Four other courses all of which will carry two hours of university credit will also be offered this fall. The course in literature will be taught by David Thompson, asstant professor of English. Mr. Thompson has specialized in this field of literature and his course should appeal to those who are interested in acquiring a better acquaintance with this subject. It is planned to meet English norm requirements for teachers.

Morse of the law school, Tuesday; problems of the curriculum by Dr. F. G. Macomber, professor of education, Wednesday; and advanced art appreciation by Dr. N. B. ### EUGENE CHAMBER SELECTS LUCKEY spent $9,416.97. During 1937, revenues were $7,505.06 but expenditures were only $7,563.99 leaving $241.07 cash balance—and this after paying off 1936 running bills and $1,100 on the bonded debt, and adding considerably to furniture and fixtures. Mr. Rodman figures the Chamber "made" approximately $1,600 by thrift.

The Chamber still owes $2,960.22 on its bond account but only $754.37 of this is not now covered by assets. The figures are taken from an audit by Spencer Collins.

New Constitution

The Luckey administration also takes office with a new constitution. With only a few changes in wording the members adopted the new setup. Chief change provides for the appointment and announcement of a nominating committee each year at least one month prior to the annual meeting and that committee is required to publish its slate with a statement of the qualifications of each candidate at least two weeks prior to elections. This will give ample time for opposition to organize, if any.

The annual report listed a long array of achievements—progress on the Willamette Valley project, progress on Route F, completion of the Willamette road and the new super highway to Junction City assured, new postoffice assured, air transport and air mail studies continued, convention business greatly increased, merchants' division active in protecting community from fakirs and pests, bright prospects for at least one plywood plant and other industries improved, 4-H market day a big success, primitive area in Three Rivers region established to stimulate recreation; Oregon Trail Pageant highlight of banner year in tourist traffic.

troit had a fire covering 24 acres which burned nearly a million feet of logs, but this fire was not on government property and the forest service figured only in aiding the fight against the blaze.

A real problem facing officials of the forest is the burning of slashings between now and the next rains. Elliott pointed out Tuesday. Before the last rain it was too dry and it is advisable to get the burning done before future rains dampen the forest. Complete plans for burning slashings are prepared by the forest service and are available to those who have slashings to burn.

Crews Still Held

In the Siuslaw forest, the summer protective crews are being maintained as conditions have not warranted their release as yet. Supervisor R. S. Shelley said. Tuesday was reported a "four day" which means that humidity and other factors still hold danger of fires.

However, the season on the Siuslaw forest has been the best since 1918, according to Supervisor Shelley, the forest having reported only 39 fires to date. There were no C fires, fires covering more than 10 acres.
