Whiteman and his orchestra. This event will last until 1 a. m. Saturday at noon the campus luncheon will be held, to be followed by the annual Oregon-Oregon State football game on Hayward field. Special between halves stunts, and other unique features, together with music from the university 85 piece band, will add color to this event.

Other events on the crowded week-end calendar include dedication of the new $460,000 library Saturday morning at 10:30, and a concert by Madame Galli-Curci Sunday afternoon. A number of special dinners and other events are planned by living organizations also.

To Decorate Campus
The entire campus will be vividly decorated for the week-end. Every house will have a huge sign of welcome, while banners and placards will be placed all over the city. Eugene citizens are cooperating in every way to make the week-end a complete success.

A suitable place to stay will be found for every visitor, since the alumni office and the Eugene chamber of commerce have established a housing bureau to find accommodations for all.

Assisting Dalton in arrangements are Jean Palmer, Coronado, Calif., assistant secretary; Richard Pierce, Salem, dance chairman; William Vermillion, Baker; Genevieve McNeice, Portland, co-chairman of the campus luncheon, and Warren Speed Waldorf, Eugene, publicity chairman.

Freshmen will take a prominent part in the celebration this year, and already have started a huge bonfire, to be set off as a feature of the noise rally Friday evening. They will also paint the concrete "O" on Skinner's butte, and guard it against raids preceding the big game.

BUDGET COMMITTEE NAMED FOR COUNTY

Interest collected during this period equals only 89.01 percent of the current 1937 tax roll.

"The sole source of revenue available to all counties is a direct tax levied upon tangible property, the assessed valuation of which has steadily decreased since 1929, with the result that the base upon which the tax is levied has each year grown more narrow.

"The 1938 budget must contain an item of $15,000 for the 1938 elections, whereas the 1937 budget carried an item of only $5,000. The 1937 legislature amended the old age assistance statute, thereby raising the age of eligibility from 70 years to 65 years. The legislature made no plan to raise funds with which to finance this added expense. Consequently, the funds to carry out this law must come from tangible property. It has been estimated that the number of persons in need of the age and eligible for old age assistance, will be increased from 50 percent to 60 percent by this reduction in age. Lane county during 1937 will spend approximately $50,000 for old age assistance, and an additional amount of near $30,000 will be necessary for the year 1938, on account of the age reduction.

"It will be necessary to include in the 1938 budget some $5,000 to take care of tax sales during 1938. Only $1,800 was placed in the 1937 budget for this purpose. "Recently the county purchased from the state highway commission for $200,000, the contract upon which we owed them $263,000, a saving of $63,000. At least $127,500 of this will be paid with 1937 and 1938 gas tax revenue, which we would not have received anyway, but it will be necessary to raise the balance, or $72,500 through the 1938 budget. "The 1937 budget contained $310,028.09 for roads and bridges. The January freeze cost us at least $50,000 in road damage, consequently reducing our 1937 road work by that amount. The 1938 road budget should be more than the 1937 budget if possible, of the Bushwhackers "trimming" Mr. Farley. "Too widely advertised," Mr. Farley interrupted, later commenting he had come in for considerable "kidding" from his eastern friends when they saw the big Democratic chief astride the wooden horse wearing the big chunks of whiskers.

JIM FARLEY MEETS EUGENE SATURDAY

During the banquet introductions, Mr. Luckey called upon all democratic postmasters to stand; then for the republican postmasters—the latter were as minus as Oregon's score against U. S. C. last year.

"That makes it 100 per cent democratic," laughed Mr. Luckey.

Among those in the reception room to greet Mr. Farley was Miss Lorraine Barker, Eugene co-ed at the University of Oregon.

"The University of Oregon? It is a fine institution," Mr. Farley told the campus miss.

Miss Mary Jane Mahoney, University of Oregon student, was among the early arrivals at the Osburn to meet her father, Willis Mahoney, prominent Klamath Falls politician who was among the large crowd of out-of-town visitors at the gathering.

In the lobby preceding the banquet, republicans—and they were numerous—came in for much "wise cracking" from their democratic friends. "We have a republican table in there to line you up and shoot at you," a democrat told his republican friend. The "special" table was missing—it would have crowded out the democrats, a republican commented later.

Portland, Coquille, Holly, Medford, and many communities throughout the Eugene trade area, Lane county as well as many adjacent counties were represented, when the "roll call" of postmasters was taken at the banquet.

York boxing commission and is vitally interested in the sport. "They haven't any colorful fighters now," was his comment. "It takes a man like Dempsey to reach the heights. Tunney was a good fighter but he did not have the personality of Dempsey."

How good it was to relax! First he sat on a chair, loosened his tie. Then he lifted his feet on the bed. Finally he lay down on the bed and buried his bald head on the pillow. He was talking away when someone entered. "Oh, hello—Gee, it's good to see you. Doesn't he look good, Ambrose?" he asked Ambrose O'Connell his secretary.

responding week in the preceding year."

Hope For Airmail
There was a note of hope for those who are trying to get airmail and air transport service for Eugene in Mr. Farley's explanation of how the postoffice department from the beginning has aided the development of transportation.

"This department aided the pony express of pioneer days," said he. "It aided in the development of canals and railroads. It has assisted more recently in developing air mail and air transport, and in my opinion your airmail service is still in its infancy."

"The first air mail was flown between New York and Washington in 1918. In 1932 air mail receipts were $6,000,000 a year. This last year they were $12,000,000. I predict these returns will be doubled in the next four years and you will see the time when there is direct airmail to every community where there is demand or need for it."

The Pacific air mail which has reduced the trans-Pacific gap from three weeks to five days will soon be paralleled by trans-Atlantic service which will be daily, in Farley's opinion.

To the great relief of his audience, he went into that little matter of the imperforated stamps which caused a hubbub early in his regime.

"We put those stamps on public sale," said he, "and the 9 million stamp collectors of the United States immediately bought $1,600,000 worth."

Then the inimitable Farley personal touch:

"Come See Our Stamps"
"If you come to Washington or your children come to Washington, visit our philatelic bureau and let them show you our great collection of stamps, not only American stamps but stamps from all the world."

And as to President Roosevelt: "I believe we are fortunate in having as our president a man who has an amazing understanding of world affairs as well as our home problems. You would have to work with him to appreciate it. I have seen him in cabinet meeting state accurately the boundaries of a province in China or the course of a great world river. He knows every state in the union, its crops and its problems and its achievements. I believe he has brought to his duties a more comprehensive knowledge than any of his predecessors. Furthermore he has a sense of humor; his feet are on the ground."

F-D Likes Northwest
The president, Mr. Farley assured his hearers, "likes this great Northwest" and Bonneville, Grand Coulee and other vast projects are only tokens of his interest.

Mr. Farley's talk was broadcast by KORE and Willis Link furnished the address system which removed acoustic worries from the armory, and the Odd Fellows band entertained the armory crowd while the official party was being dined at the Osburn. Both gatherings were non-partisan under the joint auspices of the chamber of commerce and the Lane County Museum Commission. Governor Martin and U. S. Attorney Carl Donough were among the notables who accompanied Mr. Farley to Eugene.

The Farley caravan was a swift moving affair. When Eugene's representatives joined up at Salem, Dr. Irvin Fox and Dr. Orville Walker who represent the McCredie Springs hospital project were put in touch with Mr. Farley's secretary to outline the plan on the ride to Eugene.

The dynamic Farley insisted on making a personal visit to every postoffice on his route from Portland to Eugene. Near Canby he talked to Mrs. Mary Toll who has been in the service 47 years. As the caravan halted with sirens shrieking, Farley jumped out and ran in.

"I'm Jim Farley," said he. "Well," said Mrs. Toll, "I don't know's I ought to let you in."

But she did and a fine visit was crowded in.

At Tangent, Postmaster James E. Jenks Jr. was honored with a call; at Shedd, Mrs. Nellie P. Satchell was honored; at Halsey, Joseph W. Drinkard met the big chief of the service; at Harrisburg, Postmaster Harold C. Kizer had to show his whole plant, and at Junction City, though it was late and drizzling, Mr. Farley took all the time needed to talk shop with Postmaster Isaac C. Howard. Postmaster Frank Armitage escorted

Mr. Farley through the establishment in Eugene.
At every point Farley somehow found time for interviews with newspaper people, whether representing big dailies or country weeklies, but when the questions approached delicate political topics he shook off the tacklers the way Ambrose Shindler did at Southern Cal.

Even Farley's 15 minute "breather" at the Osburn was spent stretched flat on a hotel bed talking to interviewers or posing for pictures. Orderly throngs followed the famous man everywhere. The postoffice inspectors who guard his safety had no worries.
