TIME AND OPINION ARE CURES

THE greatest cure for pessimism in this country is the fact that no part of the American scenery ever seems to stay put. Our social life flows into some pretty distressing forms every now and then, but it always remains fluid. Bad as things may get, they never get beyond the reach of change.

It is interesting to find a striking example of this by looking back a few years at conditions in New York City.

That peculiarly American form of highly organized, commercialized and protected lawlessness which goes by the name of "racket" was enjoying the high noon of its heyday, then. Every big city had its rackets, but in New York they had been elevated to the stature of big business. Nobody had ever seen anything like it.

Bad as they were, the prohibition rackets were only part of the picture. Once-respectable labor unions had come under the control of gangsters. Almost every carrying and servicing trade imaginable was paying its regular tribute to the muscle men. There was protection for all of the big shots; the prosecuting machinery would not function, the alliance between politics and crime was air-tight, the police department was effectively shackled, and people were beginning to accept racketeering as an unavoidable evil, like traffic congestion.

And the point is, not so much that things were very bad, but that there was not the slightest reason to hope that they would ever be bettered. It was possible to prove, by inexorable logic, that corrupt political rings would always rule the metropolis, that such rings would always maintain an alliance with the underworld, and that the people would go on and on paying toll through all the future.

But somehow it didn't work out that way. Somehow, in spite of logic, the people of New York elected a reform mayor. Somehow an incorruptible special prosecutor was assigned to clean up the mess. Somehow he found witnesses who would talk, investigators who could not be bribed, juries that would convict and judges who would sentence. The racketeers began to go to jail.

Then other things that logically couldn't happen did happen. The reform mayor got himself re-elected. The crooked political ring was utterly routed. The special prosecutor got himself elected regular prosecutor. The unions that had been victimized by the racketeers woke up and supported the men who were sending their crooked officials to jail.

And so, today, the picture in New York has changed; furthermore, it has changed in precisely that way that looked utterly impossible half a dozen years ago. We have discovered that gangsterism is not an unavoidable part of big city life, after all, and that no evil is permanent if the people decide they don't want it to be permanent.

Change is the law of life, in America. Remember it: it may save you many hours of pessimism.

AN "IF" IN SHANGHAI

THE profound effect which Japanese victory in China might have on the complicated network of European imperialism in the orient is indicated by announcement that the Japanese may take over the international settlement at Shanghai.

This warning comes from Lieut.-Gen. Iwane Matsui, commander of the Japanese forces on the Shanghai front. So far, it is only a warning; what gives it point is the perfectly obvious fact that if the Japanese do decide to take over the international city, the white powers have no way of stopping them.

Such a development would completely change the picture of European exploitation of China. The great British investments in China, the vast structure of British trade with China—both are keyed largely to British sovereignty at Shanghai. Make Shanghai a completely Japanese-ruled city, and the effect on British investments and British trade, as on the investments and trade of other European powers, would be profound.

Opposition to emphasis on football arises again, as colleges find there are too many letters of credit on the campus.

FOOTBALL WOLVES HOWL

IN Portland last Saturday we saw the University of Oregon's "fighting sophomores," as some sports writers have termed them, receive an unmerciful drubbing at the hands of California. We saw many fans leave the stadium before the game was over, disgusted at the slaughter. And, as expected, we found that a movement is under way to oust Coach Callison and obtain another high-priced "name" coach of the Doc Spears type. Oregon did appear weak, but what many fans overlooked was the fact that California probably had the best eleven since Andy Smith's "wonder team." And, lest we forget, the wolves also were after the present California coach until this year's showing was made.

Lon Steiner appears fairly well established at Oregon State as a result of this year's record, although it should not be forgotten that Steiner got his present job when pressure forced Paul Schissler to get out. Coach Hollingbery at Washington State rates fairly well with alumni, despite a disastrous season. His 7-7 tie with Washington undoubtedly helped a lot. At U.C.L.A. and Stanford all still is quiet, although Bill Spaulding's position is none too secure if reports are to be credited.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Register-Guard Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The interrelated issues of the budget, taxation relief and the general business situation will provide plenty of headlines on Capitol Hill—and perhaps elsewhere—in the next few months.

Fiscal matters presumably won't come before Congress until the regular session beginning in January, whereafter Roosevelt will indicate and Congress must decide how much money the government shall spend in the 1938-39 fiscal year—and where the government is going to get it. Meanwhile, expenditures, taxes and the slump are on everybody's mind. A bird's-eye view follows:

Smaller Deficit Forecast
Budget: The Treasury now anticipates a $700,000,000 deficit for 1937-38, as compared with the $2,700,000,000 deficit of 1936-37. Secretary Morgenthau proposes economies of $700,000,000 to be effected on appropriations for highways, public works, agriculture—and relief. Roosevelt is not as enthusiastic a budget-balancer as Morgenthau, however, and Congress always finds it hard to economize.

Relief demands are likely to be larger than official calculations and some influential advisers believe in raising taxes and spending money rather than economizing, holding that a reduction of $2,500,000,000 in federal outlay as compared with last year's is largely responsible for the slump. Morgenthau's insistence that private industry must start something and that "no one will starve" must be borne in mind.

Relief Demands Grow
Relief: If unemployment continues to increase there is likely to be a demand for at least half a million dollars in addition to the $1,500,000,000 appropriated for 1937-38 work relief. Roosevelt has been hoping to get the 1938-39 appropriations down to a billion dollars.

Senator Byrnes of South Carolina again will try to have cities and states compelled to contribute 25 per cent of war relief funds, which would mean wrecking the WPA program in some areas, since the average level of domestic contributions is 22 per cent and sections well below the average usually can't pay more than they do.

Broaden Income Tax
Tax revision: The Treasury has been working out a revision program and Morgenthau has said he favors reducing consumer or "hidden" taxes and increasing the number of income tax payers. There's much talk of increasing tax on incomes between $10,000—or $5,000—and $50,000.

Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin will push his plan to broaden the base (reducing personal exemptions from $2500 to $2000 for married persons and from $1000 to $800 for the unmarried) and raise surtaxes in middle brackets—a combination which he says would produce $350,000,000 a year. Chances of heavier taxes are still good—if the budget is to be balanced.

Keep Profits Taxes
Undistributed Corporate Surplus Tax: Revision sure, but repeal unlikely. Congress may be more liberal, but the administration now is willing to consent only to exemptions for small corporations, limited "rainy day" cushioning and relatively small exemption for expansion purposes. Principle of the tax must be retained, the administration insists, with bulk of profit surplus subject to tax.

CAPITAL GAINS TAX: (Income tax rates applied to unearned profits, accruing mostly on stocks, bonds and real estate). No change likely unless administration gets behind move to exempt from the tax profits made on new housing developments.

TAX-EXEMPT SECURITIES: Income from federal and other tax-exempt securities is likely to be made taxable, in effect, by taxing other income additionally in proportion to amount of tax-exempt income reported.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES: Much talk, leading to eventual revision, but no immediate prospect for action.

Amendments to the Federal Housing Administration act, to make investment in new real estate developments more attractive, are likely. Also other legislation designed to stimulate private enterprise if anyone can think of schemes the administration will accept.

Anti-monopoly legislation is still in the study stage at the Department of Justice. Definite proposals probably will emerge in time, but no one knows when.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine
NOT only baldness itself, but the very pattern of baldness is hereditary. In some families, the hair begins to disappear at the temples and the baldness develops toward the center and top. In other families, baldness begins with a round spot at the top of the head and spreads toward the edges.

There are some races, such as the Eskimos, in which baldness practically never appears. A family in the Transvaal was described in which all the men in three generations became bald at 21 years of age or younger, whereas all of the women had abundant hair. Baldness was known in Biblical days and among the ancient Greeks.

Incidentally, hairlessness in animals is not uncommon—the hairless dog of northern Mexico being a conspicuous example. Apparently this trait is inherited to such an extent that mixtures of hairless dogs with normal dogs gives only half of each kind in the progeny.

The theories as to the causes of baldness beyond the hereditary effects are innumerable. Out of the idea that baldness is caused by interference with the circulation of the blood in the scalp have come innumerable notions with associated treatments.

Thus, there is the theory that the wearing of hard hats like the derby and the topper stops the circulation to the scalp and brings about baldness. Actually, young men do not begin to wear this type of hat until they get older and just about reach the age when hereditary baldness begins to appear.

There is no evidence that the boys at Eton college who wear stiff hats while very young get bald any earlier than boys of other colleges. Neither is there any evidence that those who wear soft hats or caps only have any less baldness than those who wear stiff hats.

Finally, those who go without hats entirely, as seems to be the custom with many men nowadays, also have just about the same share of baldness.

Indeed, some specialists in diseases of the skin are convinced that extreme exposure of the skin to sunlight is bad for the hair. Of course, there are some who insist that it is good for the hair. This means probably that it does not make much difference one way or the other.
