TEAMSTERS KEEP THEIR HEADS

For their courage and self-command in a very difficult situation, those so-called "rebels" of the teamsters' union in this district deserve the respect of the entire community.

Few people realize how easily this uprising in the teamsters' union could have become a riotous thing with evil results for everybody.

There have been many men in the teamsters' union who have wanted to tear up their cards and be done with unionism.

When business bloomed in 1934 and 1935, the economists said, the government "contribution" was about $250,000,000 a month.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, the gentleman from Virginia, and Mrs. Byrd and Mrs. Billy Mitchell were sitting in the House gallery reserved for members when Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas arose to make a speech.

This little uprising of rank and file in Eugene is an event of really national significance. It is a warning to the warlords of labor who have harvested fat salaries and lush expense accounts and used the dues paying members as cannon fodder in fantastic fights.

Lily Pons, the opera star, went through with a shipboard concert despite a furious Atlantic gale. She was probably under the impression that it was a storm of applause.

Amherst College is tightening up on its English requirements. What's that place trying to do, take all the color out of the language?

Tall men in Atlanta, Ga., have started a campaign against low awnings. And not a news story about the campaign was headlined: Tall Men Hit Canvases.

Two psychiatrists believe they have discovered that obesity is a matter of one's frame of mind. "Gosh, I'm feeling fat today; it must have been something I thought."

VILATIONS OF TRUST
(The Bend Bulletin)

admiration, but there will be little sympathy for him as he starts his five to ten year term at Sing Sing. His mis-use of securities, worth nearly one-fourth of a million dollars, of which he was trustee, was too completely admitted, too thoroughly established for there to be any feeling that Whitney was unjustly dealt with.

Except as to the size of the diversion there is, however, much of similarity in the activities of Richard Whitney and the manner in which the federal administration has manipulated trust funds.

The money itself is largely being spent for other purposes. It is meeting deficits elsewhere. Whitney's trust, likewise, was dissipated in an effort to meet deficits elsewhere.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
Register-Guard Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Behind the President's decision that the government should resume pump-priming to aid business were confidential reports from administration economists who said conditions were getting no better fast and that the immediate outlook seemed distinctly sour.

Advisers who had hoped April would bring an upturn found that the depression curve was going still lower. They urged against any further waiting to see if an improvement wouldn't just happen, pointing out that no new public works program could really get started before late summer or fall.

Three factors were stressed to the President as aiding the economic havoc primarily caused, as the economists see it, by a downward spiral accelerated by decreasing purchasing power:

1.—Reliable estimates had appeared which showed that inventories at the first of the year were $5,000,000,000 in excess of those stocked two years ago. While some of the inventory had been worked off, a huge amount remained. New purchasing power was held to be necessary, since billions of private dollars placed in the purchasing stream were creating no new industrial activity as long as the goods they bought were being taken out of inventory.

2.—A sharp decline in installment credit was noted. This also meant that a large amount of current purchasing power was sterile, since it was being used to pay for goods taken off the market last year. And bank figures showed that an increasingly abnormal percentage of the cash going into the purchasing stream was landing in the banks and being kept there as assets.

3.—The economists reported that the government's monthly contribution to purchasing power had dropped from above $300,000,000 a month in 1936 to $75,000,000 in 1937 and subsequently. They got those figures by subtracting the amount the government takes out of the "income stream" in taxes from the amount the government puts into it by spending. Important factors in this computation, for instance, were the bonus money outgo in 1936 and the drain of new social security taxes in 1937.

Pump-Priming

When business bloomed in 1934 and 1935, the economists said, the government "contribution" was about $250,000,000 a month. The difference between that and $75,000,000 is $175,000,000, which is one estimate of the amount government would have to throw into the pot to get business on the upgrade again.

Thus, according to this theory, injection of about $2,000,000,000 more into the next year's pump ought to do the trick.

How long such pump-priming must be continued is a serious problem yet to be solved. The national debt is due to be increased, but it's orthodox administration thinking now that it's better to boost the debt than to have a depression which does nothing but get worse—and in an election year at that.

Embarrassing Moment

Senator Harry F. Byrd, the gentleman from Virginia, and Mrs. Byrd and Mrs. Billy Mitchell were sitting in the House gallery reserved for members when Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas arose to make a speech.

"There's that baboon Maverick," sneered Byrd. "He happens to be my husband and I think he's fine, but I'll be glad to pass on your remark to him," said Mrs. Maverick, turning in her seat just in front of the senator.

Byrd flushed and spluttered, but was stopped by Mrs. Byrd who said, "Harry, you had better shut up. You've said enough."

But Mrs. Mitchell leaned forward to say she thought Maverick was one of the best men in Congress and that her husband, the late Gen. Billy Mitchell, had always said so, too.

Other congressional wives within earshot could hardly wait to leap outside and spread the tale. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Although most people are inclined to think that hoarseness or laryngitis is wholly a matter of the throat, experts are convinced that every case of chronic laryngitis demands investigation of the whole body with a view to determining all of the factors that may be responsible.

Some people constitutionally develop overgrowth of tissue after there has been damage. These people develop large scars when others develop small scars. In such cases when there is continuous irritation with inflammation and swelling, they are likely to develop permanent thickening of the tissues that are inflamed.

In people with this tendency to overgrowth of fibrous tissue, the vocal cords when inflamed tend to become permanently thickened. The muscles associated with movements of the vocal cords also develop changes which make it difficult for the vocal cords to vibrate and to meet properly when needed for speech.

In most cases, chronic laryngitis is due to some factor like infection, irritation or general disease. There are, of course, some cases in which the voice is abused by excessive use or by overstrain of the vocal cords. There are other instances in which irritating factors like smoke, dust and gases act on the larynx.

In certain diseases like gout, high blood pressure or inflammation of the kidneys, there may be difficulty with the circulation of the blood to the tissues. Certainly it is possible for syphilis, tuberculosis and cancer to affect the larynx as they may affect any other tissue in the human body.

The first step, therefore, in any case of laryngitis is to find out if any of these general constitutional factors are present and to get at such causes rather than to attempt immediately to relieve the condition by sprays, inhalations or other medicines.

Dr. L. H. Clerf records three important "Don'ts" for every case of chronic congestion of the larynx. They are: 1. Don't smoke. 2. Don't talk. 3. Don't use alcohol. Rest of the voice is one of the most important factors.

New Wells Necessary For Junction City Water System

JUNCTION CITY, April 21.—(Special)—Digging of the ditches for the pipes for the new water system is under way and rapid progress is being made by the up-to-date machinery in use. The well that has been drilled has been abandoned for the present as water in neither quantity or quality was found. The well was about 435 feet deep. The two wells that have been used to supply water for the city will probably be used. A number of local men are working on the ditches and more will be added as needed.
