WOES OF MOVIE MAKERS

Ever since the moving picture graduated from its old nickelodeon status and became a big league entertainer, serious folk have been waiting impatiently for it to grow up. Once in a while, to be sure, something like "Snow White" comes along to indicate that the movies have indeed grown up—in spots, anyhow. But for the most part the industry's long adolescence continues, and signs of maturity are regrettably few. It was a big league movie producer—none other than Samuel Goldwyn—who put his finger on the reason for this. Mr. Goldwyn announced the other day that he was going to make a film dramatizing the exiling of the Jews from Germany. This promptly raised a storm of protests from the other movie barons, who objected that the American movie business in Germany would be ruined. So Mr. Goldwyn replied: "Why should Sam Goldwyn wait 200 years to make a picture of the most dramatic thing that has happened in this generation?"

If the movies are to make any claim to maturity at all, the only possible answer to such a question is: "He shouldn't." Yet the peculiar conditions under which movies are produced make it almost impossible for such an answer to be returned. For Hollywood makes movies for all the world. It has to guard its foreign markets with the most zealous care. And if it makes a picture that offends a totalitarian government—as, for instance, in Germany—it runs the risk of facing quota restrictions or other reprisals which will cut off a sizable part of its profits. Consequently the industry has had to surrender its independence. It may not offend anyone as a result, it must fight shy of all the great, living issues which are absorbing the world today. And as long as it does that, it cannot pretend to have reached maturity.

Now Mr. Goldwyn apparently is going to try breaking this rule. He proposes, as he says, to "make a film like the newspaper print the news," telling a dramatic story as he sees it without worrying about the toes that get stepped on in the process; and every movie-goer should hope that he remains firm in his resolution. The movies will some day be one of the most tremendously important cultural and educational agencies on earth. They will offer an entertainment that is living, breathing, truly adult. But they won't be and do those things until they find some way of shaking off the restrictions imposed by their slavery to the foreign market.

LET'S SEE YOU WORK

"Observation in the field" as the greater part of the business student's course of study is an idea that's attracting the attention of modern educators. The dean of one business college suggests that teachers themselves would do well to take advantage of this method as a means of realistic business research. The dean points out that the study of statistics is merely the study of results, while the study of the business man in his lair is the study of the statistics' causes. Something, certainly, of considerable moment is going to come out of this thing. If the studies are to be of any value at all, the paragon of the business world aren't going to be the only specimens examined. And one of two things is likely to happen: either a great many sharp dealers are going to be forced to do some hasty housecleaning, or the next generation of business men is going to have an extraordinary number of sharp dealers of exceptional talent. Or maybe what's going to happen is an unprecedented boom in the mental sanitarium business.

THE BIGGER THE WHAT

How long do you suppose it's going to take the puzzling mind of man to get over its perpetual amazement of mere bigness? The Eiffel Tower, the tallest structure in Europe, is not the most beautiful. It is not the most beautiful in Paris. As a matter of fact it has probably been called more bad names by more architects than any other building of comparable size on the face of the earth. But the Eiffel Tower turns out to be the country's biggest drawing card. Over 800,000 people visited it last year; nearly 300,000 more than visited the Louvre Museum, a few blocks distant. All the Louvre has to offer is the greatest collection of art the world possesses. It's not hard to understand why artists who don't have an emaciated look have a neglected one. They don't all get the chance of Sculptor Gutzon Borglum, who took to carving his statues out of mountains. Captors of an animal later identified as a guinea pig described it as rabbit-faced, sheep-dog-coated, mouse-eared, and frog-voiced. It sounds as if it made a belated escape from a laboratory.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
Register-Guard Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON, May 20.—(Special)—Among other depression results is a partial revision of the theory, previously held almost unanimously by politicians, that Herbert Hoover wouldn't have the ghost of a chance of being the next Republican nominee for President. As the "Roosevelt depression" drags along, many Republicans, although they still remember the "Hoover depression" vividly, aren't as convinced as they were that their last President would be the worst possible candidate in 1940. This fact is not due to any inspirational quality of Mr. Hoover's latest 11-point "recovery" platform, which has caused no large ripple. Nor can it be said, despite the former President's desire to vindicate himself with a second White House term, that there is any actual boom in Hoover stock. The man's chances have improved somewhat from zero. Or, if you felt he was a 100-to-1 shot a year ago, you might say he was a 50-to-1 shot now. Odds against Hoover may continue to shorten. He is still in virtual control of the Republican party machinery.

Berry Bustup
Senator George L. Berry of Tennessee, heretofore a loyal and obedient administration servant, has flailed out at the new spending-lending program. This means George and the administration have busted up. The White House decided not to help Berry get renominated, figuring that the TVA-marble episode in which Berry figured, the senator's attempt to monkey in the federal-state TVA-private power whirling, and the almost unanimous opinion that Berry couldn't win under any circumstances added up to a heavier load than it wanted to carry. District Attorney Tom Stewart backed by the Crump machine and Senator McKellar, is likely to beat Berry and other candidates for the senatorial nomination. Stewart was a prosecutor in the celebrated Scopes "monkey trial."

Shooting High
Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson is a guest in nearly all local doghouses since other members of the Interdepartmental Committee on Civil Aviation (representing Commerce, War, Navy, Post office, Treasury and one or two more departments) discovered Johnson was British diplomacy but has felt disillusioned since Anthony Eden was fired from the British cabinet.

Most quoted line of the week among Foreign Service officials and other diplomats appeared in the magazine Ken in a column written by Claude Cockburn, who reported: "A profound statement on Anglo-German relations is proffered by a British first-class barman in Dover, who claims 'Germans are our blood brothers. They are close to us in every possible way. They think like us, act like us—and that's why you can't trust them a bloody yard.'" A former Washington correspondent of the London Times, Cockburn (pronounced Coburn) is well known at the State Department, which still follows the lead of merce, War, Navy, Post office, Treasury and one or two more departments) discovered Johnson was British diplomacy but has felt disillusioned since Anthony Eden was fired from the British cabinet. plugging for a one-man commission to regulate aviation with the idea that he would be chairman. Assistant Postmaster General Harlee Branch and Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson promptly wrecked J. Monroe's chances beyond repair. The aviation industry helped them. There will be a five-man commission, as desired by the Senate, or a three-man board, as favored by the House. Johnson once achieved fame before a congressional committee when, asked what he knew about the merchant marine—over which he had supervision—he replied: "I can handle a small boat as well as any man in this room." AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine
As we grow older our eyes become less efficient. We find it difficult to see as well as we did previously, particularly for reading and close work. cause the tissues of the eye do not have the power of repair that exists in the tissues of the young. Our eyes tire sooner than they did previously. Benign infection, slight hemorrhages, and other changes heal more slowly. Physicians who specialize in disease of the eye have been giving much attention to these problems in recent years. One of the difficulties with the eyes in old age is the fact that the lens of the eye is not as elastic in age as it is in youth. Therefore, we continue to see well at a distance but cannot see as well close up. This condition is called presbyopia. Usually this comes on in the middle forties, but in people who are born far-sighted or with lots of astigmatism, it may come on earlier. Many women who are sensitive about wearing eyeglasses try to avoid them after middle age, and instead attempt to use all sorts of eye drops, eye tonics, eye lotions, and other materials, with the idea that these may in some manner correct the tissues and improve sight. The result is that they continue straining and fatiguing the tissues to such an extent that permanent, serious effects may take place which might be avoided. Recently Dr. E. M. Alger has emphasized the fact that other changes which occur in the eyes of the aged, while trifling, sometimes give a good deal of pain and trouble and may be avoided. As a person gets older, the white part of the eye is not as smooth and not as white as formerly, but tends to get thicker, redder and rougher. The circulation is not as good as previously, so that the eyelids may get rather scaly. Furthermore, they tend to chap and crack in the angles more easily than when one is young. The eyelashes become fewer and shorter, exactly as the hair falls out with increased age. For this reason, older people are more likely to get cinders and dust in the eyes than the young, and the irritation tends to be more quickly. Most of these are simple conditions easily relieved by the use of hot compresses of a solution of boric acid, but there is danger that styes or small abscesses may form because correct hygiene is not practiced soon enough. Finally, the conditions called cataract and glaucoma affect the aged much more than the young. The onset of these conditions is insidious and many times can be avoided, if older people will arrange to have an examination of the eyes made at least once a year.

Willamette Songmen Will Give Concert at Methodist Church Sunday

Religious Educators to Be Guest Speakers at Sunday Services of Baptist Church
By JEAN RANDOLPH
(Register-Guard Church Editor)
The Willamette University Songmen, directed by Prof. Cameron Marshall, will present a concert Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the First Methodist Episcopal church. The concert is being sponsored by the Wesley Foundation.

In a concert given in Eugene a year ago, the Songmen attracted a large audience. This season, they have sung in different Pacific northwest cities and over the radio. Proceeds from an offering taken at the concert will be used to send delegates to the National Conference of Methodist Youth in Boulder, Colo., in September.

The 200th anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Episcopal church will be observed by Methodist throughout the world Tuesday, May 24. Dr. W. W. Youngs, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Tillamook, an authority on the history of Methodism, will give an address at the local church Tuesday evening on the Aldersgate experience of John Wesley, founder of the church.

To Visit Baptists
Dr. T. H. Hagen, director of Christian education for Baptist church in Oregon, will be guest speaker at the evening services of the First Baptist church Sunday. For the past 36 years, Dr. Hagen has held this position, working at different times in Washington, and South Dakota before coming to Oregon. He will return from active service this fall.

Dr. Hagen is also director of the young people's assembly of the Baptist church, which meets each summer at Cascadia. A visitor at the church Sunday morning will be Mrs. Frieda C. Davison, children's director of Christian education for the Baptist church in Washington, who will visit the Sunday school.
