RELIEF POLITICS THE ISSUE?

According to several very able Washington columnists, the Nudal's relief politics will be the issue which the Republican party will seize in the buildup for 1940. It is, indeed, an issue. More than that it is a scandal. Such a spectacle as Pennsylvania's Duffy taking toll from 40,000 relief victims support his political machine makes the blackest sins of even the Harding era seem tame. The GOP bled the rich suckers. The Nudal plays the "five and ten" game.

But we doubt if the 1940 campaign can be won merely by playing the variations of this issue. Such things as White House meddling in state politics and the president's personal control of spending for the nation's needs will build up a vast repugnance and distrust of the Nudal. The Republicans, however, will still need a CONSTRUCTIVE PLAN. They will need some positive program which they can sell to the public as definitely better than the Nudal.

The Republicans will have to accept large scale relief as a probable necessity for some years to come. They will have to accept social security and a program of social reform. The key could be found in a simpler, less expensive, more honest plan.

Labor relations offer an important opportunity for constructive attack. People everywhere are sick and tired of the fighting. People in organized labor as well as out of it have absolutely no confidence in NLRB. The Nudal has muffed one of its most admirable chances by becoming rabidly partisan. The public would welcome a fair and square plan for the peaceful adjudication of labor disputes—a plan which would establish the fact that the interests of capital, labor and the public are common.

And there must be an honest plan for the control of government borrowing and spending.

A sound program will not be hard to devise. The big problem is going to be to find the MAN.

RADIATORS AND DRUM CORPS

According to McGurk, that rasping noise you hear is the Radiators creaking home from the Rose Festival parade and that muffled thumping may be the Legion's Drum and Bugle Corps lifting feet which are still swollen and aching from the duties they have performed. To the gallant Radiators, we hoist a salute. They are the Old Guard of those all but forgotten booster days. No prizes were theirs. The town neglected to give them the float and the pretty girls to furnish a motif for their efforts. But they were in there, you may be sure, swinging their red walking sticks, snapping along behind the Drum Corps. The least we can do in these indifferent times is to honor the march they made. As for the Drum Corps, what with the new blood and the enthusiasm which Hersch Taylor and J. P. Kalkoven and Clarence Simon have pumped into it, you might say that it has been remade. It broke into the prize lists for its performance, and its members, new and old, are convinced that this is just the beginning of "happy days." Eugene is smug. Eugene has lost some of the joy of youth. It isn't taking part in the fun of Oregon as it should. But there is an Old Guard which never surrenders and there is Youth coming up. And as the Chief Philosopher of the Rose Festival expedition remarked:

"Eugene had to finish their damn parade!"

The Cleveland detective whose car was stripped by thieves has not caught them yet. When he does, he's considering suing for defamation of character.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

FLORIDA IS AVENGED

(Medford Mail Tribune)
Who-a-ah!
Is Harry Hopkins' face red?
And how about son "Jimmy"—and all other faithful members of the White House entourage, who did everything in their power to slaughter Senator Gillette of Iowa, and put over their pet stooge, Congressman Otto D. Wearin in his place.
No only does the Roosevelt favorite get a terrific beating, but the man marked for slaughter ran like a scared rabbit.
For which let all good citizens give heartfelt thanks!

For just as the unexpected triumph of Senator Pepper in Florida started all this mess, perhaps—just perhaps—this unexpected slap in the face for primary meddling, on the part of the administration, may end it.

At any rate here's HOPING.
And this much may be said for Franklin D. Roosevelt. He has never shown any disinclination to break with the House, to defy the Senate, to abandon old friends to acquire new ones; to suddenly abandon one course and choose another;—but he has NEVER, in this column's knowledge at least, shown any disposition to kick "vox populi" in the seat of the pants.

In this direction he always been a perfectly good and consistent DEMOCRAT (without the capital "D").
Whatever he has done, he has done because he had—or BELIEVED he had—THE PEOPLE BEHIND HIM. When he found the people were NOT behind him, he has invariably done everything in his power to get behind THEM.
Which is all to his credit, and also smart self-interested politics.

Whether or not he will change his course to conform to the voice of the Democratic party in Iowa now will depend undoubtedly upon his interpretation of that result.
Why for example did administrative meddling in the Florida Primary bring such an OUTSTANDING triumph, and if anything stronger meddling in the corn belt, bring such a DEVASTATING defeat?

The way in which the President answers that question will undoubtedly determine his future course, as far as primary meddling is concerned.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
(Register-Guard Washington Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, June 13.—Although the President's speech in mingled praise and criticism of the tax bill sufficed to bring wrathful retort from Senator Pat Harrison, F. D. R. managed to restrain himself from adopting one recommendation of certain brain-trusters which would have resulted in at least temporary bedlam.

The president would have proposed to Congress, under this plan, that it promptly pass a new bill which would have exempted more than 90 per cent of all corporations—the "little fellows"—from tax.

Some members of the pump-priming school of advisers, suspecting that the present spending-lending program might not be enough to stimulate business appreciably, had figured that the government could afford to throw a couple of hundred million dollars into the pot even if it meant increasing next fiscal year's deficit by that amount as a result of a corresponding cut in the tax burden.

They suggested that all corporation net incomes of less than $15,000—or some nearby figure—be declared exempt.

Although the idea appealed to Mr. Roosevelt's love for the bold and spectacular, it's impossible to learn how seriously he considered it. Perhaps at some future time he will consider it again.

Influential brain-trusters who conceived and quietly promoted the plan were sure it would stimulate business and re-employment, that relieved small business men would joyfully spend or invest the money saved.

But specially did they lick their chops with Machiavellian anticipation as they considered the political possibilities. With the vast majority of little as well as big business men bitterly critical of the administration, violent upheavals and conflicts of sentiment might be expected if all small corporations (only 12 per cent of corporations earn more than $25,000) were relieved of tax.

It was just as well for politicians with high blood pressure that Roosevelt couldn't be sold on the scheme.

La Follette To Return To Fold?
Belief that Gov. Phil and Sen. Bob LaFollette will be found lining up with the Roosevelt forces in 1940 is increasing. It squares with information that Phil, suspecting that a real national crisis will arise not long after 1940, is principally anxious to build up a LaFollette following which will be an important national force at that time.

Phil's dramatic presentation of the party to the nation frightened many nervous liberals who automatically thought of Hitler. Fears of a Fascist ting in the new party are a curious phase of the reaction to it, considering the LaFollette tradition. But Mayor LaGuardia of New York, after reading the speech and hearing a report of the Madison meeting, said privately in reference to the party's emblem—a circled cross:

"It looks like a swastika with the ends cut off!"

Labor leaders and labor friends such as LaGuardia, annoyed by certain phases of Phil's actions and words, can hardly forget, however, the incalculable service Bob LaFollette has done for labor in his investigation of labor espionage and other underhanded tactics against unions.

Vacation Days For G-Men
Perhaps you haven't noticed it, but about half of J. Edgar Hoover's G-men aren't on the job these days. Chiefly because he has raised salaries by a total of about $125,000, Hoover found that appropriated funds weren't going to last to the end of the fiscal year, June 30. One method of meeting the emergency was to have half the force take vacations and accumulated leave in May and the other half in July, saving money on travel expenses, per diem allowance, telephones and so on.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

BY MORRIS FISHBEIN
(Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine)
When the principle was established that artificially induced fever might be beneficial in a wide variety of diseases, attempts were made early to see the effects of such treatment on diseases of the eye.

This was particularly important, because many of the diseases of the eye are difficult to attack and some of them are considered hopeless. For this reason physicians, working in a large mid-western hospital, tested the fever methods on an assortment of 50 different eye diseases.

In heat treatment the patient is first made ready by being given a special diet with large amounts of orange juice and dextrose. He is then put into the fever box with the head outside. He does not receive any fluids until a fever of 105 or 107 degrees is reached.

This fever is maintained for five hours. During the time of the fever he is given cool, weak salt solutions because unless the salt contained in the body is maintained there will be subsequent cramps and other pains like those of heat stroke. The temperature is taken regularly every five minutes and the pulse is counted every 10 or 15 minutes.

It has long been established that certain diseases are more susceptible to treatment by fever or heat than are others, principally because the germs which are involved in these diseases are also especially susceptible to increase in temperature. It is also believed that the heat treatment may be especially of value in stimulating the defense mechanism of the body to action.

As a result of their tests of more than 50 cases, the investigators are convinced that the fever treatment is most useful in the treatment of gonorrhea and syphilitic infections of the eye, but that various other forms of disturbances of the eye, including ulcers and neuritis of the optic nerve, must be studied much more extensively before it can be determined whether the heat or fever treatment is really of value.

It must be remembered, however, that heat treatment constitutes a very severe form of treatment. There have been very few cases of death as a result of such treatment, but it is strenuous, and complications in the form of collapse and heat stroke do occur when the treatments are not given in a suitable place by someone who is especially trained in the use of the method.

It is especially important that everyone have constant attention while in a fever machine in order to watch the progress of the treatment and to make certain that serious and sudden collapses do not occur.
