STILL not quite able to believe the miracle is Mrs. Mary Babyk, of New York, pictured holding her 14-month-old son, Michael, who will probably go through life dubbed "Lucky Mike." The baby was playing on a bed in his home on the top floor of an apartment house. He plunged through an open window level with the bed and fell seven stories to the ground. Mrs. Babyk rushed downstairs to pick up, as she feared, his crushed and bleeding body. She got there in time to see him rise without a whimper and walk over to her. "Lucky Mike" and his mother are shown after the accident, whose total damage, thanks to a network of clotheslines that broke the baby's fall, were abrasions on his head and wrist.

Prep Journalists Open Conference On U. of O. Campus

Merit and point systems, prospect of membership in journalism honor societies, aid various other ideas for organizing a staff to get the paper started and keep it going were described today by speakers and delegates to the 13th annual high school conference, which opened its two-day session at the University of Oregon School of Journalism.

The conference broke all attendance records, with more than 200 active newspaper staff members from 60 high schools in attendance.

Build the first issues of the high school paper around the good points established the previous year, and save new or radical ideas to try out later, advised Eric W. Allen, dean of the school of journalism, in his address to the delegates. Learn to know the staff members, then place responsibility on those who are dependable, the dean said. Above all, keep timeliness one of the greatest assets in good journalism, in mind, he urged.

Editorials and the editorial page should be in line with the times, and versatility, variety of subject, conciseness, good humor and "good common sense" should all find a place, Paul Deutschmann, Eugene, editor of the Emerald, university daily, declared. The editor should write the leading editorials, but his page may also contain columns and other features by the better writers on the staff.

Features should not only entertain but enlighten, and quality of content should never be sacrificed just to fill a page, Raymond Lindgren, Forest Grove "Morning Men" declared. With the modern devices, mimeographed papers can now have art and a wide variety of typography, Alan Roberson, Carlton Hillside, told the conference.

Delegates were welcomed to the university by Dr. Donald M. Erb, president, and by Harry Weston, Portland, student body president. Both urged the visitors to look over the campus, with its recently completed buildings, and invited them to confer with any staff members on any phase of university life.

The conference took up news reporting, sports and other phases during the afternoon. The annual press conference banquet, with initiation of several journalism students into Sigma Delta Chi fraternity as a feature, was scheduled for Friday evening.

Western Pine Business Up 5 Percent, Claim

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 21.—(AP)—Reports from 123 mills showed last week's new business of 64,955,000 board feet of lumber was 5 per cent more than the previous week, the Western Pine Association said today.

Shipments of 66,829,000 feet represented a decline of about 3,000,000 feet. Production dropped from 81,083,000 to 77,347,000 feet. Orders were about ten million feet ahead of the corresponding week a year ago but shipments and production were slightly less.
