Morse Says Bar Examiners Not Too Severe in Examinations

The state bar examiners board is not becoming too strict in admitting new lawyers to practice, states Dean Wayne L. Morse of the University of Oregon law school in commenting on the re-examination by the state supreme court of papers by the 33 unsuccessful candidates.

Dean Morse explained that for the past ten years there has been a growing demand on the part of the public and by leaders of the profession to raise the standards of the legal profession. The time has passed, he said, when it has been in the interest of sound policy to permit just any one to practice law irrespective of whether or not he is competently trained or could pass a thorough examination in law.

If the legal profession fails to maintain high standards by means of insisting upon thorough preparation for the bar and by means of eliminating from the profession the unethical and dishonest, then laymen, through their legislative representatives will do the task for the profession, Dean Morse said.

The university dean declared he had complete confidence in the board of bar examiners in the state and in the leaders of the American Bar association who are doing much toward raising the standards of the profession.

Economics Experts Confer With Erb

Two experts of the federal bureau of agricultural economics conferred this week with Dr. Donald M. Erb, president of the University of Oregon, and other faculty members on studies of migration and land settlement in this state.

Plans were made at the conference for assigning as senior and graduate theses subjects the problems which have arisen as a result of the movement into this state of thousands of settlers from the middle west and other eastern points.

The studies will show the economic standing of the people coming here, their activities, and the way in which land has been found for them.

Before becoming president of the university Dr. Erb was professor of economics at Stanford, and much of his career has been spent in research and study in this field.

Lewis-Gainer World Title Match Postponed

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 21.—(Special)—A sinus condition which forced a week's postponement of his bout with Champion John Henry Lewis added today to the woes of Al Gainer, dusky New Haven challenger for the light heavyweight title.

Obsidians Planning Winter Ski Program

The Obsidians, Inc., Eugene's mountaineering organization, who have pioneered skiing in this vicinity, are to again include a definite ski program in their winter schedule.

Regular ski trips, with experienced leaders, are to be taken into the area around the base of the Three Sister mountains, as well as the other favorite ski areas.

The forest service cabin at Sunshine camp, at the base of the mountains, will soon be ready for winter use, and organized trips with competent leaders are essential for the safety of parties, on these trips into the mountains, Obsidian officials said.

The first trip on the new schedule, soon to be released, is a work trip to Camp Sunshine to cut the winter wood next Sunday, Oct. 23, with Louis Waldorf and Paul Lafferty as leaders.

The club is also putting up more markers into Sunshine Camp in accordance with the safety patrol soon to be announced.
