Boredom' Blamed for Clashes on Siberian Border

By CLARK G. LEE TOKYO (AP)—A Japanese officer is back from the troubled Manchoukuo-Siberian border with a new explanation of the 10-year warfare there between Japanese and Soviet frontier troops. The soldier's explanation: "Life in a border outpost becomes unbelievably monotonous. Fifty to 50 men crowded together in small quarters for weeks at a time, seeing the same faces, hearing the same voices. There's nothing for amusement or diversion. Temper becomes short as days grow longer after weeks of isolation. You grow hungry for excitement or movement. Sometimes you see a sign of life across the border. In the distance it may seem to be a furged Soviet soldier but by all...

MISS IGOR CASSINI, Washington, D. C., gossip writer, is shown here telling Austin McDonald how he was seized by three men, armed, feathered, and threatened with emasculation following a countrified dance at Warrenton, Va., to which he had escorted Miss McDonald. Cassini named three men in his charges. He said objections were made to recent items in his column.

Coast Guard Keeps Tab on Hurricanes, Cuts Damages

MOBILE, Ala., July 10.—(AP)—When a tropical disturbance begins brewing out in the Gulf of Mexico the U. S. Coast Guard shoulders the job of warning lowlanders ashore and fishermen at sea that the big blow is on the way. Even when the disturbance is a mild one, these maritime guardians swing into storm drill, just in case the trouble develops into a hurricane and smacks down on the coast with towering tides whipped up by 80-mile gales. The Coast Guard keeps tab on the progress of a storm through the Federal Hurricane Warning System and by its own observations of wind direction and force, barometric pressure, force and direction of tides and wave intervals. It's a tricky storm whose velocity and course the Coast Guard can't predict five or six hours before it strikes land. The Coast Guard spreads word of a storm by means of boat, plane and truck. Headquarters at Mobile Mobile is headquarters for the Northwest Florida, Alabama and Mississippi Gulf Coasts, and cutters on patrol in the area keep regular contact with the stations here. These boats keep track of the movements of shrimping fleets and when a storm is coming they make the rounds and give warning in plenty of time for the little travelers to run for a lee shore. Privatizing parties and the smaller commercial craft that follow the coastal route through Mississippi Sound to New Orleans also depend on Coast Guard patrols to tell them of bad weather ahead. The Mobile Coast Guard has a seaplane unit at Biloxi, Miss., for all kinds of emergencies in fair weather or foul. In storm times, the planes are used for warning assignments that cannot be covered by the patrol cutters. Planes Spread Warning Islands off the Mississippi Coast are low-lying and likely to be partly inundated by high tides and the planes fly over them and signal the residents to evacuate or batten down, depending on the severity of the approaching storm. The planes are also used in locating distressed craft and guiding the cutters to their assistance. Ashore, the Coast Guard uses radio-equipped trucks for the dual purpose of taking weather observations and warning families living in lowlands near the coast. The trucks are prepared to assist in evacuating these families or to send warning parties into sections which cannot be reached by road.

Girl Scouts News

CAMP CLEAWOX, July 21.—(Special)—In the "good old swimming hole" from ten o'clock to eleven-thirty every morning Girl Scouts at Lake Cleawox learn to swim, improve their present skills and have a good time. Instruction is given and near the end of the session Red Cross tests for beginners and intermediates are given. At the end of the first session, Harriet Harper, Corinne Clark, Nannette Haggard, and Jean McMahan passed the beginner's test. A life saving course of juniors and seniors is conducted by Beverly Young, waterfront director, in which the girls are working to pass the new Red Cross life saving test and thereby become official life guards. Seventeen hours in the water is necessary before taking the test which includes practice in all life saving methods and swimming strokes. Those taking the course are Mary Elizabeth Earl, Susan Huffaker, Jean Doris Griffith, Molly Chase, Margaret McGee, Barbara Crosland, Harriet Barrett, Betty Hyde, Pat Johnson, June Rogers, Ruby Jackson, and Claudia Sevier.

Calendar

Recipe Ideas

(By NEA Service) When United States citizens are sent to Puerto Rico for duty or business they need never feel homesick for our national bird—chicken. These two recipes from the Territory, prove that they can eat good chicken dishes and will also have plenty of fruit with regular American lavishness. Puerto Rican Fried Chicken (Serves 2) One spring chicken jointed, 4 tablespoons butter, 2 onions chopped, 2 green peppers chopped, 1 cup chopped tomatoes (canned or fresh), 1/2 cup chili sauce, 1/2 cup uncooked rice. Heat butter in deep skillet. Add onions and chicken which has been salted and rolled in flour. Brown delicately. Add all the other ingredients and enough water to cook the rice without burning. Simmer about 40 minutes until rice and chicken are tender. Be careful to use only enough water to cook the rice dry. Serve rice and chicken together.

The native cooks pour rum around the rim of the platter and then touch a match to it as it is served, giving this dish its name—Flamed Fried Chicken. Caribbean Fruit Croquettes (Makes 12 portions) One-quarter pound fresh cherries, 1/4 pound fresh plums, 1/4 pound fresh peaches, 1/4 pound fresh bananas, 4 ounces sugar, 1 pound stale cake, grated rind of a lemon, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon. Stone and peel fruits and cut into small cubes. Stew with sugar until no juice is left, or as they say, "stew dry." Add cinnamon, lemon rind and crumbled cake. Stir well over low fire until dry, then remove from heat and cool. Form into cork shapes, dip in flour, egg and white bread crumbs and fry in hot fat until browned. Serve with sauce of apricots and rum or non-alcoholic rum flavoring.
