In the BALCONY

LADY OF THE TROPICS, McDonald; Joan Bennett might just as well watch the black dye out of her hair, because Hedy Lamarr has still got ecstasy!

This picture of warm love did come to Eugene on a hot day, but first viewers spent the rest of the day shooing friends to see Hedy. If her second picture was really the flop that caused it to be shelved, posterity will probably find it brought out when Miss Lamarr's beauty has faded.

She and Robert Taylor make as handsome a couple as any Hollywood could put forward. In this story of warm love in some port of Indochina their strange passions are first pictured.

In her first picture, "Algiers," which wasn't expected to be the triumph it was, Hedy gave me the impression she couldn't act. The box office showed that her beauty was enough, however. She was evidently taught a few things in her second unreleased film, because as "Lady," she registers emotions with the best of them.

Manon is a white girl someplace in Asia. She has just enough native blood coursing in her veins to keep her from highest society.

When she meets an American adventurer, done to perfection by a slangy Robert Taylor, she also finds love. He jumps the yacht which is tak-him about the world and soon marries the girl.

After the ceremony she is unable to leave for a European honeymoon and an American home because of the violent love of a high government official. After being spurned he resolves that she will never leave her native land.

And she never DOES leave.

The tangled triangle has enough interesting knots to make the picture itself unusual from a dramatic standpoint.

Though the customers cry with the curtain, they can rest that Hedy is not really dead, that Hollywood will hasten to capitalize on the European ecstasy girl, have many more of her pictures made soon.

Best line of laugh, by someone in the audience at the climax when Mr. Taylor is asking Miss Lamarr to tell him all: "Why don't you TELL him?" and then, after her HELL she killed the villain, a jubilant "Good!"
