STARTING THEM ON THE RIGHT TRACK

It is inevitable these days that more and more attention should be directed toward the problem of finding something for employable youngsters to do.

A lot of people discovered with something of a shock recently that not only were 5,000,000 of the nation's 21,000,000 young people between the ages of 16 and 34 out of work, but that the roster of employables was increasing by about 500,000 annually.

As the problems of pensions, compensation for the jobless, relief and unemployment begin to show up in their true perspectives, people everywhere are getting interested.

One of the principal efforts being made today in behalf of youth is to improve present methods of vocational guidance.

It was natural, in the desperation that accompanied depression, that many persons found themselves doing jobs for which they were not trained and which they didn't enjoy.

Proper vocational guidance is only part of the answer. It will be a good start. But the glaring mathematics of 5,000,000 unemployed youngsters with an annual increment of 500,000 still haunts us.

Neither the Vocational association nor any other single agency can offer a workable plan for creating new jobs.

Business men would like the government to remove "red tape" from tax reports.

It is estimated parents take an average of five days to ponder over a name for the new baby.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By JOHN KELLY
Register-Guard Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 13.—Days of hysterical appropriations are over and now an appropriation must be justified.

such a list—if there is duplication and usurpation. Steamboat traffic on the upper Willamette is almost extinct; logs are now trucked on highways instead of being rafted down the Willamette to the mills in Portland area.

Senator Holman wants to know more about the government agencies which are supposed to find jobs for unemployed. He has heard complaints of housewives who say it is impossible to obtain a domestic.

Another inquiry: What is the need and cost of the migratory labor camp south of Dayton, Ore. There are no crops being harvested in Oregon now, says the senator, yet when he visited the camp it was populated.

In a corner Holman saw four shotguns with the dogs, come in handy for a little hunting. The senator thinks that no person on relief, drawing subsistence from the federal government, should be permitted to have lethal weapons.

He is not hard-hearted and realizes aid must be furnished the needy, says the junior Oregon senator, but there have been too many millions wasted and the time has come to apply the brakes in spending.

Cause of delay in the president sending the nomination of Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach for federal district judge in Washington state was the argument between the White House and the senator.

By the rules of the game, Schwellenbach is entitled to the district judge job. Political conditions in Washington state are confusing this year and Schwellenbach isn't certain he could be re-elected, also his relations with the senior senator, Homer T. Bone, are not pleasant.

Under the 1939 agricultural program of Triple A, it is estimated that 31,000 farmers in Oregon will be paid $4,121,000.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygieia, the Health Magazine

Proteins are the materials out of which our bodies are built. They constitute the essential elements of the cell.

When we starve, the protein material of the body is called upon, and the effects on our tissues are obviously not beneficial.

The proteins include a large variety of amino acids. When protein food is taken into the stomach, it is acted on by the pepsin and hydrochloric acid which make up what is called the gastric secretion or gastric juice.

Most proteins are composed chemically of a number of elements, including carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, oxygen and sulfur.

Not all proteins are equally useful in the diet of man. While there are 22 amino acids or protein substances in the human body, it is known that there are 10 absolutely essential in the diet for good growth and health.

When any one of these 10 is absent very long from the diet, growth and tissue repair are not satisfactory.

We do not buy them in pure chemical form. We buy them as constituents of well-known food materials—eggs, milk, cheese, meat or fish.
