

Teachers Rehired By School Board

city school were too high and something should be done about it, and that they weren't going to pay any more rent than they now do, if they can help it.

Some years ago, under an agreement with the city council, the school board moved into the city hall room they now occupy, at a stipulated rent of $50 per month. In 1937, reorganization within the building took place, and the board was obliged to give up half its space, while the rent was cut to $40.

According to a letter received by the board at the meeting, from Cal Bryan, city recorder, the agreement had a time limit, and the old rate of $50 was to go back into effect in June, 1939. But according to the school board, there was no such agreement, there was no time limit, and last night they voted to send a letter to the city council and the city recorder and tell them so. As far as is known, there is no official confirmation of either agreement.

Members of the board also discussed the question of whether school district warrants should be placed on open sale, or sold directly to local banks. Under the present plans, warrants are placed in the banks, and checks on the school board are drawn on them. Members agreed, for the present, to continue under that system.

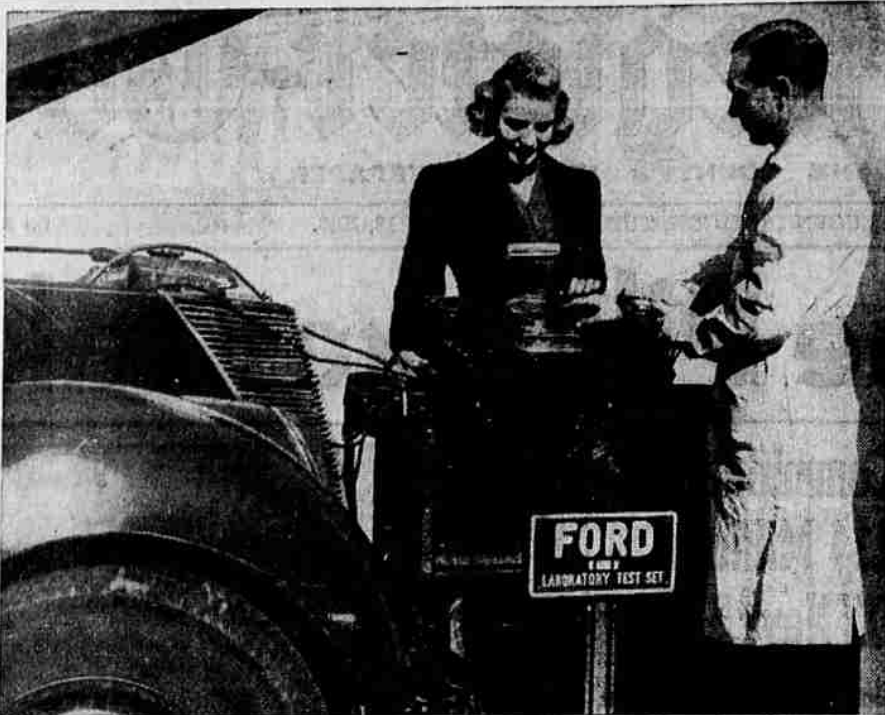

A petition from the parents of Condon school, requesting a room to be used for kindergarten in the school, was debated, with members of the board deciding it would be unwise for the school to grant a room for the purpose. Under the parents' plan, a fee would be charged the parents of each child using the kindergarten, a procedure which, in the minds of the board, was not comparable to public education. A previous proposal for a free kindergarten was found to be impossible unless school district voters should vote upon it, under state statutes.

Likewise tabled for much the same reason was a proposal to instruct students in the city schools in some of the handicrafts for a nominal fee per child. The program was intended to replace that recently withdrawn by the WPA.

Prior to the meeting, a delegation of fathers of Edison school children were received with a request for converting a school play shed into an auditorium. Under the present conditions, according to the fathers, there is no place for school functions, and the shed is unheated and barren.

The delegation presented a plan by which the playshed could be floored, heating apparatus installed, and a stage built, at an estimated cost of $500. The job would necessitate enclosing one open side in cellophane, but would present no complicated building problems.

The board promised the matter

First steps in reconditioning the motor are exhaustive tests by the motor analyzer, and the service manager pictured above is checking every part of the engine to determine what repairs are necessary. would have its attention at the meeting in which they plan next year's budget, not yet completed. Members of the committee included Claire Kneeland, Fred Brenne, Bob Bertsch and Glen Hastings.
