WHO PAYS WHAT TAXES AND HOW

Nothing certain, says the old saw, but death and taxes. True enough. But while taxes are certain, the kind of taxes is not so certain.

The Federation of Tax Administrators found that out in a recent survey. And they found that 42 per cent of all taxes collected by governmental units in 1939 were of a kind entirely absent from the tax system of 40 years ago.

Taxation was a simple matter in the early 1900s. More than half of the taxes collected then were direct property taxes—you owned a house or a lot, or a building, or a piano, and you paid taxes on it.

Here, from Treasury figures and the Census Bureau, are figures that show who pays what taxes and how:

Table with 3 columns: Type of Tax, 1912, 1932, 1939. Rows include Property, Sales and Occupational, Motor Fuel, Liquor, Tobacco, Death and Gift, Motor Vehicle, Customs, Payroll, Income, Miscellaneous.

Several things appear from the above table. First, we have no "tariff for revenue" at all, for customs receipts are a poor last among sources of income.

Observe how the automobile has come to the front as a tax source, with 10 per cent of all taxes in 1939 coming from auto and gas taxes.

The apparent rise in the percentage of income taxes is not conclusive as the table makes it appear, as in 1922, for instance, income taxes accounted for as much as 28.6 per cent of tax collections.

The fall in the percentage of property taxes is probably due to the fact that they had reached as high a point as the traffic would bear and had to stop there.

This swing in the kind of taxes over a period of years shows clearly how taxation, like everything else, has had to adjust itself to a changing civilization.

NO ARMISTICE IN PRICE WAR

Just at the time when building is beginning to show signs of recovery, people in close touch with it are worried. For 10 years the country has waited vainly for a real revival in building, most continuously depressed of all industries, and one that is generally believed to hold the key to recovery.

Now that building is approaching boom conditions, due to the defense effort, economists are worried about prices. They are already showing a marked tendency to rise in the building field, though many believed they were altogether too high before.

It is this department's belief, however, that the verdict at the polls this November will demonstrate these worthy Democrats were right the first time.

Millions of Americans, many of them loyal members of the Democratic party, will register by their ballots their firm belief that a third term for any President is still "UNWISE, UNPatriotic AND FRAUGHT WITH PERIL TO OUR FREE INSTITUTIONS."

A NECESSITY FOR DEFENSE

Wendell L. Willkie's proposal that a secretary of aeronautics be added to the president's cabinet because of the importance of that branch in defense is one that should receive serious consideration in any adequate program of rearmament.

PROTECT THE WORKERS!

The devastating explosion at Kenil, N. J., which took the lives of 47 powder factory workers is a matter of deep concern to every man, woman, and child in the country.

It is too early to say whether sabotage had anything to do with it or not. All we know is that in the days of 1915-1916 a large number of such catastrophes were traced to the work of saboteurs directed by foreign sympathizers and in some cases by foreign governments.

The workers who died in this blast gave their lives in the preparedness effort just as surely as if they had been in the military service. Explosive-making is a hazardous job at best, but doubly so in these days. The government, federal and local, must spare no pains to protect the lives of those who have a part in this dangerous phase of the defense drive.

Nazi rabble-rousers, who are boasting that "soon we shall own the world," are much peeved to discover certain sections are still peddling 99-year leases as defense bases.

Never has the U. S. Army had as tough a task as trying to make minute men out of softies who have been taking two hours for lunch.

Berlin residents shouldn't be worried over a possible fuel shortage this winter. Not if the R. A. F. continues to turn on the heat.

Too many men find the biggest trouble with middle age is that it affects them mostly in the middle.

With autumn fogs settling over England it remains to be seen how the Nazis do against the R. A. F. in its natural habitat.

Iron Guard coup fails in Rumania, marking the end of another brassy attempt to steal a government.

California nudists ask governor to make nudism compulsory in all schools. They probably figure the kids should be taught the naked truth.

Willkie accuses FDR of putting the draft in politics, and what would politics be without a little wind, anyway?

Among certain Eskimo tribes marriage is compulsory, which might not be so bad at that. As we recall, those igloos have built-in dog-houses.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

"YESTERDAY, TODAY AND FOREVER" (Medford Mail Tribune)

Upon request, we are glad to print the following extract from the Congressional Record: MR. BRIDGES, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the appendix of the Record the text of the 1928 anti-third-term resolution adopted by the Senate and a reference to the Senators now in the Senate who voted for the resolution.

THIRD-TERM ISSUE

(By Joseph Leib, founder of first Roosevelt for President Club in the United States) On February 10, 1928, the Democratic United States Senators listed below, voted against a third term for any President of the United States, and approved the following Senate Resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from Presidential office after their second term has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions."—Congressional Record, February 10, 1928.

The following Senators voted for this resolution: Alben W. Barkley, Kentucky; Henry F. Ashurst, Arizona; Robert F. Wagner, New York; Pat Harrison, Mississippi; William H. King, Utah; Peter G. Gerry, Rhode Island; Millard E. Tydings, Maryland; George W. Norris, Nebraska; Kenneth McKellar, Tennessee; Matthew M. Neely, West Virginia; Morris Sheppard, Texas; Elmer Thomas, Oklahoma; Burton K. Wheeler, Montana; Key Pittman, Nevada; Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin.

But, where do these great patriots and legislators stand today? If the third-term principle was bad in 1928, why is it good in 1940? The answer to that, of course, is: In politics good and bad always depend upon whose ox is gored.

It is this department's belief, however, that the verdict at the polls this November will demonstrate these worthy Democrats were right the first time. Millions of Americans, many of them loyal members of the Democratic party, will register by their ballots their firm belief that a third term for any President is still "UNWISE, UNPatriotic AND FRAUGHT WITH PERIL TO OUR FREE INSTITUTIONS."

A NECESSITY FOR DEFENSE

(Salem Capital Journal) Wendell L. Willkie's proposal that a secretary of aeronautics be added to the president's cabinet because of the importance of that branch in defense is one that should receive serious consideration in any adequate program of rearmament.

Over 20 years ago General William Mitchell, profiting by the lessons of the World War, advocated the development of air power as a separate service and was court-martialed by the brass hats of the army for telling the people about it.

In an article in the Cosmopolitan, Major Al Williams, famous American air man, and expert on aircraft, asserts that the only way the United States can attain air power is to form a separate air arm and because of this advocacy he has been forced to resign from the reserve forces for opposing policies of his superiors.

Major Williams, like Mitchell before him, asserts that army and navy officers who have reached command by years of service in the land army or fleet, "are not and can never be competent air leaders" because they are psychologically unprepared by training and experience.

The rivalry and jealousy between army and navy, the numerous quarrels over designs, costs, over coast defenses and bomb sights, handicap both services, and prevents efficiency, such as that attained by Germany. The air force should be organized as an independent agency and not made subordinate to land and sea forces with which it must cooperate.

family group, the Willakense grange, cowboys and cowgirls, and finally the first prize winner in division one, the Mormon pioneers with their handcarriage.

Upon reaching the center of the stage the Mormons dramatized a well-remembered and deeply moving scene from the 1937 pageant—the death of one of the women in their party, and then trekked on singing one of their best known hymns, "Come Come Ye Saints." Second prize in this division, which was for a suitable entry for the pioneer parade, went to John Scott mounted on a steer; and third prize was taken by C. C. Fairbanks with his team and surrey. Cal Young judged these entries.

Patricia Edwards Wins Winner of division 2—a pioneer family—was Patricia Edwards, garbed in authentic pioneer costume, carrying a child in her arms while three other youngsters stumbled along behind, clinging to her skirts. E. O. Potter made this decision.

Winner of division 3, a young boy singing "Oh Susannah" was little Jack DeFoe. The young man made a hit with the audience when he announced that the cold air had put his banjo out of tune but that he would sing unaccompanied. Hal Young was the judge in charge.

Three prize-winners were named in division 4—best individual character from previous pageants. The blue ribbon went to Joe D. Hale impersonating a guide to the wagon train; second to Hugh Simpson, the Lone Cowboy, who sang "Wagon Wheels," and after an enthusiastic burst of applause from the audience encored with his number from the 1937 pageant, "Home O' the Range"; and third to C. D. Farmer as Jim Bridger.
