PEOPLE AND PRESIDENT
(Christian Science Monitor)
For months before the Democratic Convention the American press and public were continually playing with the third-term question.

WE LIKE POLITICAL RALLIES

One of the hopeful signs of this unusual political campaign is the return of the old time political rally. The Republicans are holding one at the Armory Wednesday evening at 8 and they are featuring the always interesting Charles H. Martin, Democrat, who is paying back his old friend Franklin for what Franklin did to him when he was governor.

No doubt the Democrats will soon be holding a great public meeting. It would be nice if they could parade Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania as a Republican governor who has plunked for Roosevelt.

But they do accomplish this. They snap us out of lethargy. The vast American public is coming out of the coma which is more responsible for its ills than any political system.

"A people may prefer a free government, but if from indolence, or carelessness, or cowardice, or want of public spirit, they are unequal to the exertions necessary for preserving it; if they will not fight for it when it is directly attacked; if they can be deluded by the artifices used to cheat them out of it; if by momentary discouragement, or temporary panic, or a fit of enthusiasm for an individual, they can be induced to lay their liberties at the feet even of a great man, or trust him with powers which enable him to subvert their institutions; in all these cases they are more or less unfit for liberty; and though it may be for their good to have had it even for a short time, they are unlikely long to enjoy it."

CALL FOR OUR PAGEANTERS

From the old United Press warhorse Ben Titus who is now with the Oregon State Travel and Information department comes a letter asking if the veterans of Eugene's famous Oregon Trail Pageant will hitch up their ox teams, don their buckskins and calicoes and perform for a special color film of the Old Oregon Trail which the state advertising service is planning to send nation-wide.

"If there are one or more covered wagons in your backwoods, and if there are two or more oxen with yokes or whatever impedimenta is necessary to pull them (the oxen) and if we could get some of your excellent Very Little Theatre actors to put on the act for us, and if there is some terrain nearby which would not show anything modern, we would certainly like to take this movie shot. We are considerably handicapped by not having any money to stage such shots. It must also be made plain that we could not identify this shot as near Eugene but merely in Oregon. But we are featuring some beautiful shots of McKenzie river fishing and we may aid you in publicity for your pageant next year."

Well, pageanters of Lane county, what do you say? Can we do it? Have we "one or more" covered wagons and "two or more" oxen? Ha! Ben, where have you been all these years?

We have also a letter from Burt Brown Barker who has just returned from British Columbia where Mr. W. K. Lamb, archivist of Victoria has consented to hunt for Canadian-American historical materials suitable for the 1941 pageant.

Time to be getting organized. If we want to get in on national advertising programs we must be set by December.

Learning that the Great Lover Barrymore left his profile on the cement in front of Hollywood's Chinese Theater, a lot of husbands think it served him right.

In call for a "No Third Term Day" on October 23, Wendell Willkie is pointing up the power of the people to defend the two-term custom. The voicing of widespread protest on that day may well arouse citizens to the opportunity they will have on November 5 to reject the essentially undemocratic attitude which centers on one personality as indispensable.

Other Presidents have had the power to dictate a third-term nomination. Other Presidents have come to the end of two terms in times of national crisis. But always before they have bowed to Jefferson's argument that continuance in office tended dangerously toward personal rule. They have made their own contribution to the spirit of American institutions by withdrawing voluntarily. Never before have the people themselves had to defend the custom in an election.

Now on the surface a third term may not appear contrary to the spirit of a constitutional democracy. It can be said that if the people choose to keep a President for three or more terms that is a democratic decision. But that contention loses sight of the fact that personal rule nearly always depends on popular support. Today's dictators probably would win even in free elections. Some of the most despotic kings in history were also the most popular. The Caesars depended as much on bribing the populace with bread and circuses as on control of the army.

Indeed the deepest danger to democracy comes from the people, not the President. No President can set up personal rule in the United States except by popular approval. But such a step toward dictatorship would be no less destructive of the American system of government than a military coup. For it would mean a weakening of the and of the self-reliance and self-control which are people's own understanding of their institutions essential to self-government.

Constitutional democracy in the United States has never meant unrestrained action by popular majorities. The Constitution itself, the division of powers, the representative system—all were intended, like the two-term custom, to put curbs on power in government, even power supported by popular vote. In a vital sense the attitude which exalts one personality and his power is inimical to the spirit of self-government, which counts on the people finding the necessary wisdom and leadership in any emergency and to avoid the sort of hero-worship which makes despots. The American people have the opportunity to show that they still understand that essential difference between their form of democracy and dictatorship.

WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 21.—MR. ROOSEVELT'S popularity has slipped at a great rate in the solid South, traditionally Democratic territory. The palace guard is aware of this, but is also aware that the southern states are in the bag, as usual. Mr. Roosevelt's popular vote will shrink, but he will capture the electoral votes in those states—and that is what counts.

Democrats are begging Oregon's Senator McNary to invade the South and insist that he can make Texas go Republican if he will make a speech there. Two delegations of Democrats have flown to Washington to urge the Republican nominee for vice president to visit Texas. They report that one Willkie-McNary club of democrats has 100,000 members.

According to Paul Yates, for years a Democratic political writer in Texas, the new deal farm program has caused distress, disease, starvation and death among share-croppers, or tenant farmers. Owners of large plantations, or disinterested share-croppers and have kept all the government benefits for themselves. This has turned into the highways thousands of homeless, hopeless families—the class upon which the new deal has been depending for a large bloc of votes. Not the dust bowl, but the farm program, has caused an army of "Okies" in Texas, according to Yates—now supporting a Republican ticket for the first time in his life.

It is a common sight to see visitors at the capital building send in their card to McNary and when he emerges to meet them they assure him that although southern Democrats, they are "off" the new deal.

Without exception, every state of the solid South will give the Republican ticket the largest vote it has ever received, but this does not mean that Mr. Roosevelt will lose these states or that Willkie-McNary ticket will carry any. But it does reveal public sentiment and how old-time Democrats in that area feel toward the new dealers in Washington.

AS to the much advertised Gallup poll (partly owned, according to report, by a few wealthy men who are interventionists), its accuracy is constantly challenged. The belief is expressed that instead of reflecting public opinion, it creates public opinion. For example, several states which Gallup lists as for Roosevelt are known to be going strongly Republican. This is especially true in the agricultural mid-west where Henry Wallace has been campaigning but making no impression.

NOTE: It may be stated that direct financial benefits are being received from the government by 12,779,000 individuals. In May, 1940, there were 1,965,000 on WPA projects; 368,000 on other federal construction projects; 270,000 in CCC camps; 467,000 on NYA program; 296,000 on NYA out of school works; 3,248,000 payees under agricultural conservation plan; 2,850,000 receiving old-age assistance and other assistance under social security; old-age insurance and railroad retirement, 228,000; relief, work relief, etc., 3,444,000, and so forth and so on.

Senator McNary has refuted the assertion Wallace has made on the stump that benefits are paid for by the wealthy. The Oregon senator has produced statistics showing the highest bracket income payers bear only a small part of the tax load—that Farmer Brown and his neighbor and the little fellow in mill or forest are carrying the greater part of the taxes.

If the expected war comes, American citizens may find their money regimented as in England. The English banks have almost no cash. The government is urging every Englishman to save and spend nothing unnecessarily but to place every shilling in the banks. The cash deposited by the customers is sent to the treasury of the Kingdom of England, Scotland and Wales and in return the treasury gives a note, something like a treasury certificate of the United States treasury, and bearing interest of a fraction of one per cent. When a bank needs cash it discounts the certificates at two per cent. The plan enables the treasury (not the Bank of England, which is a private institution) to mop up all the loose cash deposited. This English procedure is being studied by the controller of currency.
