SAN FRANCISCO'S FLAG RIOT

It would be interesting to know what was in the mind of the German consul at San Francisco—Hitler's buddy Franz Wiedemann—last Saturday when he ordered the Nazi banner displayed in Bagley alley, just off of crowded O'Farrell street. To be sure, it was the anniversary of the founding of the German Reich in 1871, a day upon which the display was entirely legal under diplomatic rules, but in New York and Washington and other great centers of population, German representatives were discreet.

Perhaps Captain Wiedemann wanted to test the state of feeling on the Pacific coast. If so, this time table of the San Francisco affair offers interesting evidence:

10:15 a. m.—A shopkeeper in O'Farrell street "takes a bit of air," happens to glance up Bagley alley, sees the big blood-red banner with the black swastika swaying in the breeze ten floors up; he calls another man out of the shop; they look and point; a small crowd gathers; a burly man with a slight Germanic accent (possibly an attache of the consulate) approaches, explains that it is a German holiday making the display legal. . . . "Why don't the so-an-so put the American flag with it?" . . . "not required" . . . "the Hell you say," etc. etc. . . . an Irish cop appears . . . "what's the idea?" . . . cop listens, grunts, walks off. . . .

11 a. m.—Several hundred people packed into O'Farrell street; the gentleman with the Germanic accent has disappeared; hoots and catcalls begin to be heard; reporters and cameramen from the San Francisco dailies are busy all over the place; the cop on the beat has been reinforced by a sergeant and several men on horse. . . .

11:30 a. m.—Shops and factories beginning to let out for noon or half-holiday; hooting and howling growing more menacing; several volunteers try to get into the O'Farrell building to "see the so-and-so" (possibly the consul); cameramen very active.

12 noon—Riot call sent in; O'Farrell street almost completely blocked; a head appears in the consulate window over Bagley alley and there are boos and yells; the head is drawn back; cops keep muttering "Move on!" but nobody moves; out of nowhere appears "the navy squad" which sets out to get the Nazi flag by lowering a man from the eleventh floor down onto the flag staff; cops take the attitude that their job is to keep the crowd good natured; the navy gang's the navy's headache.

12:30 p. m.—Extree! All about the flag riots! etc. etc.

There are lots of Italians in San Francisco but if the San Francisco Italians have any affection for the Germans it was not in evidence. (Mayor Rossi's flower shop is just around the block). The Irish police were not quite as neutral as Eire, but at least as neutral as the United States. Captain Wiedemann did not come out of the building till after the mob had dispersed, but it is safe to say he would have found the going rough. Had the consulate been on the ground floor, plenty could have happened.

We are not at war, but the San Francisco mob says—"Nuts!"

THIRD TERM; THE WAR TERM

A great actor at his best was President Roosevelt in his third inaugural. He dramatized the moment—and himself. Even in its brevity, the third inaugural speech reveals a conscious striving for effect. If we refuse to be utterly impressed by the rhetorical show, please remember that it is our American privilege to be "not impressed."

Every speech, of course, is made for a time and place. This speech was made to open the third term, the war term, and the flippant impulse impels us to dub it the "Washington-Lincoln-and-me" speech. The White House attendants, we are told, called it "the lesson in democracy." Maybe some paragraphs will make the schoolboy copy books.

It was a speech for the wide world, for the worried, wondering nation, but mostly for those out front, the inaugural crowd, the rollicking, roaring shareholders in New Deal political prosperity and participants in the pageant.

It was a war speech to a nation which does not know whether it is in or out of war, to the people whom he told only last October that "we will not participate in any foreign wars." It was a sermon on the Constitution and democracy by the man who now asks more sole power than any president ever had or asked.

It is a speech of reassuring aphorisms which are challenged by present facts. Democracy is not dying, the President reiterates, but it has descended to a condition where it must be held in trust.

Because the third inaugural was evidently composed as a literary work, we hope we shall be pardoned for analyzing it mainly as such. Mr. Roosevelt has many of the attributes of greatness, but among these sincerity has never been conspicuous.

We are long since at war, whether the truth be told or not. We have already set aside all but the skeleton forms of our constitutional procedure. We prate of our devotion to ideals, but we cravenly rely on others to make the blood sacrifice (at least that is the declared intent).

There are dangerous foes without but there is a much more dangerous condition within this republic and it is the avoidance of the truth.

A New York congressman finally found himself gagged. He points out, however, that it took a hold-up man to do it.

Shortage of wool because of the war decrees that dresses are to be shorter this season. You can thank Hitler for that shapely pair of legs that just went by.

A girl and her mother have both enrolled for CAA pilot training, leaving father puzzled as to what the family is all up in the air about.

A Californian will pay his divorced wife's college tuition in addition to alimony, which will enable her to live and learn.

England now is convinced the umbrella is adequate defense only against rain.

Massachusetts reports square dancing is coming back. Others say the jitterbugs merely are getting their second wind before showing us we ain't seen nothing yet.

Some folks still insist Benito will remember the time he was left holding the grab bag.

The British did a neat job of adding "ia" to bombard.

A good mixer has a lot of friends if they like what he mixes.

The future is much too short to spend worrying about the past.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By JOHN W. KELLY
Register-Guard Washington Reporter

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 21.—Next big government contract for Oregon will soon be awarded. It is for the munitions base near Hermiston, Umatilla county, about 30 miles west of Pendleton. Contracts will be negotiated shortly after Stevens & Koon, consulting engineers, complete a survey of the terrain and "spot" on a topographical map where the railroad should be, the roads and the 650 concrete igloos. This work is almost finished, although several survey crews are still in the field. Cost of job, $9,000,000 at least.

There appears to be a little confusion in Washington over which branch is in charge, the quartermaster or the corps of army engineers. The presumption is that the quartermaster department will do the constructing, although supervising officers will be from the engineer corps. An army board has been receiving the applications of contractors for consideration. The job is about eight times larger (in dollars) than any airport project of the air corps and has attracted excavators and concrete men, railroad builders and road contractors. It is work worth going after.

When finished the magazines will be camouflaged to agree with the surrounding scenery, which is sagebrush and sand. Tops of igloos will be covered with sand and sagebrush will be planted. Igloos are so constructed that if one should explode it will not disturb its neighbor. As extra precaution, no dwellings will be within miles, although an administration building will be on the site, with hospital equipment, etc.

JAPANESE are being attacked in a new direction. Federal Trade Commission is requested to up the tariff 50 per cent on canned crabs. Of canned crab used in the United States 80 per cent of 16,500,000 pounds is imported and 79 per cent of the imports comes from Japan. The commission is told that Japanese canned crab sells in retail stores for 38 cents a pound, whereas the cost of production of American canned crab is 37 cents, and on top of this the American crabmeat must pay transportation and handling charges.

No potest was raised by the Pacific coast, however. The petitioners for increasing duty from 15 to 22½ per cent were representatives and senators from Florida, Mississippi, Maine. From Alaska, famed crab canning region, came no complaint.

FOR the first time since 1925, declares the bureau of mines, Oregon produced in 1940 more gold than in any other year. Gross value of gold in 1940 was $3,288,020. It would appear that the bureau of mines does not have Oregon records back in the 1860s when thousands of men were mining every creek in the state, particularly in eastern Oregon, and tons of gold were shipped to the mint at San Francisco. So much gold rolled into The Dalles that the government decided to establish a mint there; built the foundation and then stopped.

Baker, Grant, Josephine and Jackson counties were the gold producers in 1940. In the Galice district, Josephine county, two lode mines were producing; in Baker county the Cornucopia district led the state. Most of the placer gold was recovered by dredging either with bucket dredges or dragline, there being 13 outfits in the state. The $126,578 of silver was recovered as byproducts by the mines. No Oregon mine operated for zinc, lead or copper, although substantial amounts were byproducts. With gold at $35 an ounce and other metals a few cents, operators concentrated on gold.

DR. CARL THOMPSON, of the Public Ownership league and on Bonneville payroll at $5,600 a year, according to Senator Styles Bridges, receives several pages of adverse publicity in Congressional Record. Among other charges made by Senator Bridges is the assertion that Thompson was in cahoots with an outfit selling Diesel engines to municipalities venturing in the public ownership business. For his activities in Oregon and Washington, Senator Bridges declares he should be fired from Bonneville administration for violation of the Hatch Act.

In the budget submitted by President Roosevelt he has been very nice to Bonneville. For 1940 there were 583 permanent field officers with $1,233,916 in salaries. For 1942, beginning next July 1, there will be 1,052 permanent field workers with total salary of $2,170,649. . . . Howard Latourette, Democratic national committeeman for Oregon, hase been discussing with Representative Pierce the prospect of an Oregon Democrat for the customs court when Judge Walter Evans retires. It is reported that Lotus Langley and Ashby Dickson each has the same idea.
