DONT' BABBLE

The army may be suffering shortages of certain kinds of material. It would be strange if there were no such shortages, when you consider that a year ago the country simply had no munitions industry at all. Of one thing there is no shortage—the volume of babble and gossip about such shortages.

In an unusually timely and serviceable story, Paul Harrison, who has been touring army camps and writing about them through NEA Service, showed just how evil such talk may be. "They" say, Harrison tells, that there are no rifles to drill with, the boys have just the old World War artillery guns, there aren't enough tanks, and so forth and so forth and so forth.

Nobody ever finds out who "they" are. The stories go the rounds, added to and dressed up by each person who thoughtlessly repeats them. And finally a large number of people become convinced that the army is not adequately equipped and cannot be properly trained.

Isolated cases may be true. Certain shortages, especially of ammunition, are real enough. Much old equipment has not yet been replaced by the new, which is on the way. The specific cases of which you hear may be real enough. The danger is that from constant repetition and embroidery of these incidents, a totally wrong impression may become widespread.

In general, we believe it is true, and we base our opinion on repeated reports from many men who have gone to the camps themselves to see, that equipment is sufficient for elementary training, and that new equipment is continually arriving in quantity.

There is no news that any truth about lack of equipment or poor conditions should be suppressed. If your nephew writes you from Camp Whoozis that he's been there three weeks and hasn't got a rifle yet, it may be true. But find out how many others are in the same boat, and why.

People have a right to be assured that their boys in camp are properly equipped, fed, housed, and trained. There is excellent reason to believe that these things are all being done as fast as it is humanly possible to do them.

There is a difference, of course, between neglect and inefficiency and a sheer lack of materials that haven't yet come off the production lines. The former should be exposed and remedied. The latter is to an extent unavoidable; be patient.

Above all, don't babble just for the sake of babbling. Restrain that perfectly human impulse.

FRANCE, AU REVOIR!

Farewell, France, until in some happier day we may see you again!

Painful the words, after a year's waiting and hoping that somehow out of the wreck of France something might have been salvaged for freedom. Painful the words to those who have felt and who still feel that the French people are good and clean, and wholesome.

Nearly a year ago, France suffered the humiliation of military defeat. With more than a million of her sons in German prison camps, virtual hostages, to have expected her to continue the war in Africa, or in the Near East, would have been to expect much. There were some who had learned to expect much of France, however. Hope died slowly.

France chose. No vote was possible in the confusion of surrender. Whether the French people ever were, or are now, back of Petain, or Darlan, or Laval, no one knows. There is room for the gravest doubt.

Nevertheless the Petains, and Darlans and the Lavalis are in charge of France. They have personally elected (no one compelled them personally) to play ball with Hitler. They have opened the gates of Tunisia and Syria to the German invader; they have chosen to ride a surf-board on the "wave of the future," on which one may expect the remainder of the French navy to be launched at any moment.

For the moment, the Frenchmen of Fascist mold of mind are in the saddle. For the moment, they are France. Resolutely we must push into the background for the moment the memory of Frenchmen who fought so gallantly for freedom, our own as well as theirs. We must forget, for the moment, that "Liberty, Fraternity and Equality" were born in France. We must not speculate, for the moment, that perhaps 90 per cent of Frenchmen still love freedom. For the moment, such force as France has is at the disposal of the totalitarian revolution.

That is the fact, and that is the only fact in reference to France that bears on the situation today.

To all who love France, who love the French people, who love the freedom which found so fine a flowering in France, it is painful to say this. But it is the nasty truth.

All that can be said today by the most ardent lover of all things French is, "France, au Revoir!"

Farewell, until we see you again, in your true tricolor, firm and ardent once more for freedom!

Doubt it not, that day will come!

UPON ALL OF US

From the Soldier's Handbook, small pocket introduction to military life issued by the War Department:

"The American people of their own will, and through the men they have elected to represent them in Congress, have determined that the free institutions of this country will continue to exist. They have declared that, if necessary, we will defend our right to live in our American way and continue to enjoy the benefits and privileges which are granted to the citizens of no other nation. It is upon you, and the many thousands of your comrades now in the military service, that our country has placed its confident faith that this defense will succeed should it ever be challenged."

Yes. And it is also upon you, there at the lathe, you swinging the hammer in the shipyard, you on the assembly line, you at the desk, that our country has also placed its faith and its future. Every American, soldier and civilian, bears his share of the responsibility for defending freedom which the times have imposed upon us.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By JOHN W. KELLY

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—Approximately $35,000,000 will be invested in western Oregon by the war department in the two cantonments, one at Medford and the other at Eugene. In making this announcement the war department very belatedly confirms the prediction first made in this space many months ago and which the high command repeatedly denied. The prediction that a cantonment will go to eastern Washington is yet unfulfilled, but the "dope" on that is as authentic as the projects in Oregon west of the Cascades.

Under the army estimates, it is calculated that the cost of the cantonment is $500 per man. (There are many cantonments recently built or now being constructed the cost of which runs $700 per man and at one place almost $2,000.) On the $500 per man basis Medford's military camp will represent an investment of $17,000,000. The same cost at Eugene. This is the original investment for barracks, mess halls, administration hall, sewers, water, light (later a hospital of about 400 beds) and roadways.

With 35,000 men in each cantonment it means a payroll of substantial importance. The 70,000 men will represent better than $1,500,000 a month; say about $800,000 per camp. This is the payroll alone, and troopers spend their money. It costs approximately 50 cents a day to feed a soldier, or for the two camps the quartermaster department will spend $35,000 a day of $1,050,000 each month the troops are at the cantonments. On a per year basis (period of training) the grocery bill will run in the neighborhood of $12,600,000.

Regulations call for furnishing one-half pint of milk to every man each day. This means 8,750 quarts each for Medford and Eugene; total, 17,400 quarts or 4350 gallons every 24 hours for both camps. Milk sheds of the Willamette valley will be drained to furnish this new amount of consumption. When possible, troops receive one apple or one pear a day (sometimes a peach or grapefruit), which will provide a market for Oregon fruit, particularly that of the Rogue river valley, site of the Medford cantonment. Vegetables and meat must be bought, and when possible the market is patronized.

An important responsibility devolves upon citizens of Eugene and Medford and nearby communities. This is in providing amusement for the troops. Many soldiers will visit amusement to have a frolic; many others will not go so far. Someone proposes that the town of Central Point be taken over and made into a rest camp for the troops, with movies, taverns, etc.

And before a contract is awarded or even an appropriation made by congress for these cantonments, a group has started a campaign against "sin," meaning hard liquor and members of "Mrs. Warren's Profession." Incidentally, it should be mentioned that several chaplains will be with the soldiers at the cantonments and there will be several chapels.

Either cantonment will have a larger population than 29 of Oregon's 36 counties. Only Portland will have a population in excess of these camps, for second city in Oregon is Salem with census population of 30,908, or 4000 fewer people than will be in the Eugene or Medford establishments. Jackson county is barely larger than the proposed cantonment, the county being credited with 36,213 in last year's census figures. The camp will double the population of the county (with camp followers) and will triple the population of Medford, if the cantonment can be regarded as in the metropolitan area. The Eugene camp will be only 50 per cent of Lane county population but will be 15,000 larger than Eugene.

Roughly, the two cantonments will mean $30-240,000 a year new money to those communities, plus the capital investment of $35,000,000 in cantonments.

Selection of Medford and Eugene was partly political. War department saw on its map that there was no project west of the Cascades. Great base for the army air corps is building in Pendleton; munitions depot is under construction at Hermiston; bombing range has been acquired east of Arlington; Portland has an army station, but there was a perfect blank on the ocean side of the Cascade mountains. The planning board spotted Medford and Eugene for new developments when the army is increased and money is available, but the brass hats of war department were unaware of these preparations. Meanwhile officials and public spirited citizens quietly obtained options on tracts of land for the department, preventing any attempt at a hold-up. There may be some difficulty in obtaining funds for clearing the bottleneck on the Pacific highway for military purposes between Grants Pass and Eugene, subject to revision now with cantonments decided upon at Medford and Eugene.
