Senate's O. K. On Draft Urged

—Seeking to hurry army service extension legislation to President Roosevelt, Democratic Leader Barkley said today he hoped the senate would accept tomorrow the house-approved version of the measure, which was passed last night by the hair-line margin of a single vote.

Barkley said he was canvassing the senate in an effort to have a majority present tomorrow for action on the legislation, which would provide an additional 18 months of service for selectees, national guardsmen, reservists and enlisted men.

House action came at the end of a tumultuous day.

Tempers frayed by the rough-and-tumble debate of a ten-hour session, the representatives burst into a roar when Speaker Rayburn ended the dramatic suspense of the final roll call with the announcement that the legislation had been approved by a record vote of 203 to 202.

A shouted demand was made—and granted—for a formal recheck of the vote. It disclosed that the first result was correct.

"The vote stands," declared Rayburn, "and the bill is passed."

There was more tumult—cheers, rebel yells, boos and catcalls. Administration forces had won but it was a breath-takingly close thing.

Thus the house joined the senate in approving the war department's insistent requests that congress authorize selectees, national guardsmen and reserve army components to be kept in training for a total of 30 months instead of 12, and that it remove the 900,000 maximum on the number of draftees that may be in service at one time.

Final congressional action by the weekend on a compromise between the almost identical senate and house bills was expected on all sides—but the unusually close house vote raised several questions of procedure.

The normal course would send the measures to a conference with each chamber being required to vote on the compromise version. That would mean that the administration would have to run the risk of being defeated in the house.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the majority leader, expressed the hope that the senate might accept the minor house changes in its original bill, thereby permitting it to go to the president without any further house consideration. He said he would discuss the matter with senate military affairs committeemen before reaching a decision.

League of Cities Issues Bulletin on Defense Groups

A bulletin describing the organization and administration of police reserves in Portland, Salem and Oregon City has been prepared and distributed to Oregon city officials, according to an announcement made by Herman Kehrli, executive secretary of the League of Oregon Cities.

The bulletin is designed to aid city officials in setting up both police and fire "reserves" as recommended by the Oregon State defense council recently.

"While this nation is not at war," Kehrli explains, "it is actually preparing its defenses and every local agency should make plans to meet any type of problem that may develop. This appears to be the appropriate time to provide for the training of a reserve force for both the police and fire services."

The executive secretary pointed out that past experience shows that where inadequate provisions for emergency situations are made, well-intended citizen groups will organize vigilante groups "to operate independently of the police and often without sufficient regard for good law enforcement."

The bulletin gives a short historical sketch of the three existing reserves, describes the program of activities of each, and suggests an ordinance providing for the establishment of a police reserve.

Application forms for membership used by the Portland reserve, constitutions and by-laws, and outline of an operating training program are also included.

9,250 City School Books Are Repaired

A total of 9,250 school textbooks and library books has been repaired and cleaned during the summer, Dr. J. F. Cramer, city school superintendent announced Wednesday.

The cleaning has been under the direction of Mrs. Vera Ray Lee, Frances Willard teacher. She is assisted by a crew of six teachers. The repair was accomplished at an average cost of 7.3 cents per book.

Dr. Cramer pointed out that it is much cheaper to keep district-owned books in good repair than to replace them when they wear out. The latest appraisal of school district properties shows textbooks and library books in the 11 school buildings to the value of $72,857, he added.

McArthur to Attend Public Power Meet

Plans for standardization of wage scales for employes of municipal power plants will be discussed at a meeting of the Northwest Public Power association in Olympia, Wash., Friday, J. W. McArthur, superintendent of the Eugene plant and vice-president of the organization, reported Wednesday.

McArthur will leave Thursday to attend the meeting. Operating experience and cost experience will also be exchanged by municipal plant directors attending the session.

Meetings of the northwest regional planning council and the national resources commission will also be held in Olympia at the same time, McArthur said.

U. S. Negotiates For Brazil Base

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—(AP)—Pursuing a broad strategy designed to safeguard the hemisphere, the United States today was reported negotiating for air base rights in Brazil to offset any German threat to Dakar, French West Africa.

Informed congressional sources declared the state department has initiated discussions with Brazil, urging her to resume control of an Italian-operated airport on an island off Natal, seaport on the hump of the South American continent.

From Natal, it is only 1,620 miles northeast across the narrowest part of the South Atlantic to Dakar, referred to frequently as a potential jump-off point for operations against the western hemisphere.

Members of congress concerned with military legislation expressed misgivings over the announcement from Vichy that Admiral Jean Darlan would be given supreme control of French military matters. This newest evidence of Franco-German collaboration, they declared, probably meant that Hitler would be accorded the right to use Dakar.

These legislators saw little likelihood that the United States would make any direct move to block nazi occupation of the African base, but they foresaw swift moves by this nation in the western hemisphere to offset such a threat, should it materialize. They said the most practical safeguard would be assured American access to previously prepared bases in Brazil.

This might mean, they said, that the United States would have to advance funds and equipment for such bases although it might make no effort to place troops there until the threat of a nazi move toward this hemisphere became more definite.
