PARSONS, Kas., Nov. 21.—(AP)—The enginemen piloting trains through Parsons are stumped. A state law requires trains to whistle at crossings. A city ordinance prohibits blowing of train whistles.

Councilmen View New Drainage Route

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 21.—(Special)—The drainage problem created by surface water running into the city from the area east of town which was so acutely noted during the recent heavy rains may be solved by the construction of a new drainage ditch which will skirt the east and north limits of the town. Such is the opinion of Councilman Edward Privat after viewing existing drainage facilities and the proposed relocation route along with Councilmen R. H. Morris and George Kendall, who with Privat make up the council's street committee.

The present ditch which runs through the town from east to west was proved quite inadequate during last week's downpour. Considerable property damage was suffered and the council has announced its intentions of taking immediate action to prevent such a recurrence. The ditch now in use is clogged in various places and for this reason and the fact that it will not carry enough water even when cleared has set the councilmen to the consideration of relocating the ditch.

If the street committee's report in favor of the new ditch is adopted at the next council meeting, a survey will be made of the route and a final decision made after the survey and estimated costs have been studied. Approximately six blocks of new ditch would be required to carry the water from the southeastern edge of town east to a natural swale that the councilmen believe could then be utilized to carry the water past the northeastern city limits to the river.

Total costs for the project will not be high for the property concerned in the rerouting of the ditch is largely undeveloped and the few cases where rights-of-way will be necessarily purchased will not figure large as an expense. Besides this feature the plan eliminates possibilities of unavoidable property damage that would be done in enlarging the present ditch—damage to property in the city which is much more valuable than that along the new route.

Plans are that the old ditch will be retained to drain the city itself and to make even more efficient the entire drainage program.
