he suggested that Lady Eleanor should stop talking for the duration of the war; even FDR would hardly dare. Eugene is left out of the "critical area", but we do not mourn. Some of these folks will still be critical after the war.

THE G.O.P. PASSES A RESOLUTION

There is a triumph for Wendell Willkie's leadership—and for Wendell Willkie's presidential aspirations for 1944—in the resolution adopted by the Republican National Committee at Chicago, abandoning, for the present record, what is called "isolationism."

"We realize that after this war the responsibility of the nation will not be circumscribed within the territorial limits of the United States and that our nation has an obligation to assist in the bringing about of understanding, comity and cooperation among the nations of the world in order that our own liberty may be preserved and that the blighting and destructive processes of war may not again be forced upon us and upon the free and peace-loving peoples of the earth."

However, to those who look at politics realistically, this resolution is "just one of those things" and little more. This statement is no more derogatory to the Republicans than to the Democrats.

It will be remembered that in 1920, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was the vice-presidential candidate on the ticket with James M. Cox, supporting the ill-starred Wilsonian policy of American participation in the League of Nations.

If the new resolution of the Republican party is to mean anything, it will be because Mr. Willkie or some other forceful leader gives it meaning to millions of people, or because we the people, after two bloody wars, have realized at last that we cannot shut out the turbulent world.

The other portions of the Republican declaration likewise are mere high sounding words. The Republican party says it is committed to maintain the American system of free enterprise and individual initiative and to "the two party system."

Eventually the American people will face the determination of how far American institutions can be socialized and nationalized without sacrificing the foundational institutions of local self-government and the liberty of the individual.

Perhaps the Republican party is the organization and perhaps Wendell Willkie is the man to perform the functions of "loyal opposition." We wait to see.

IMPORTANT TONGUE-TWISTERS

Mohamed Ali Jinnah and Jawaharlal Nehru may be comparatively new names to you, but they, with Mohandas Gandhi, whose name you know well, will have something to say about the course of your life for some time to come.

As leaders of India, the gentlemen with the tongue-twisting names will decide what part that nation's many millions are to play in the war. Their decision will determine, to some extent, the length of time it will take to whip the axis.

WILL TO WIN

Robert Heilferty is 95 years old. He is a Civil War veteran. He has his ideas about how we should win this war. He expressed them in New York the other day after watching part of our Army parade for almost four hours.

"It is my belief," said Robert Heilferty, "that we gather all those who are able to shoulder a gun, secure ships enough to send them over in a body—and then rip the life out of them."

The strategy may be faulty, but spirit is right. Apostles of defeatism within America please take note.

THE CLOSED SHOP ISSUE
EUGENE—(To the Editor)—While we sit around over here and argue with each other on how to win this war, there are a few Americans left in the Philippines, fighting for an idea we are just about to give away.

As long as it is getting around to the time that our public officials are getting ready to tell the truth about each other, (with the exception of some who have a so called gentleman's agreement that they won't tell on each other), why can't we have a little truth on the union situation.

We hear and read every day about the big fight on the question of the forty hour week with very rarely a slight mention of the (closed shop), which after all is what interests the man or woman who wishes to go to work, and is really the only issue in question.

Mr. Green was sure correct when he said the American people were being misinformed. I don't believe anyone has any quarrel with any group of men or women with a desire to band together for the betterment of their condition if that be possible, but by their own signed admission the executive board of the Oregon S. F. L. admit, they don't care whether you believe in the union or not, you do not have to take any oath or obligation, but you do have to pay the dues, and if that doesn't constitute the makings of the greatest racket on earth, (outside of Hitler's), I don't know the meaning of the word.

The take in Portland defense work alone is around a quarter of a million dollars a month, just about the cost of a bomber, and don't make any mistake in thinking you can work without paying that tribute, but then nice homes, good cars and strong arm men come pretty high. Even the kids in certain instances are going to have to pay to work in the fields this summer.

It seems to me that, that is a rather queer condition for the people to be putting up with right here in the finest country on earth with a Bill of Rights that no one has been able to improve on.

The most logical thing we can do if we intend to let this situation continue would be to let Green and Murry rewrite the bill of rights and from the looks of things the present administration would be more than glad to act in an advisory capacity.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By JOHN W. KELLY
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 21—War industries in the northwest will be unable to operate at capacity unless the threatened labor shortage is overcome. There are not enough mechanics or green hands available now for the shipbuilding program and the airplane factories. It is a fact that scouts from some of the large industries in Washington and Oregon are now in the Rocky mountain states looking for mechanics. In the mountain area there are no big industries and the scouts hope to round up the men necessary for the coast.

One personnel man is looking for 30,000 men and he isn't particular where they come from. He hopes to attract several thousand from Denver, some from Cheyenne and will go to Omaha if he need to find workers. Men engaged must pay their own transportation. At Bremerton navy yard H. L. Mason, lieutenant U. S. navy reserves, employment officer, is searching out for every available man. He has notified George P. Sheridan, National Youth administration, Tacoma, that he has jobs for about 150 NYA every week. Lieutenant Mason's letter has been offered to congress as to the importance of the training of NYA.

It is estimated that 6,000 must be transported from Portland to Vancouver, Wash., when the shipyards on the Washington shore of the Columbia are at the peak. Moving of this number of workers back and forth will be a problem. A greater problem will be facilities for workers to reach Swan island, where 50 oil tankers are to be constructed in a yard now being built.

Proposed to President Roosevelt by Sidney Hillman as part of the program for administration of manpower is the establishment of a labor pool or battalion, a mobile reservoir of workers which, under a directing head, can be shifted from one war industry to another as a shortage of workers develops. This proposal was made looking forward to the time when scarcity of labor for war work will become acute.

The housing trouble is breaking out all over the northwest. The thousands of dwellings at Bremerton, Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver, Spokane and Pasco, the units authorized for Medford, Albany, Corvallis, Pendleton and Walla Walla are insufficient to meet the demand. Into all of these communities are swarming an army of workers who must have a place to sleep. Housing of the most temporary and flimsy character means an expenditure of about $3,000 per unit and in some instances up to $4,000.

John L. Lewis intends trying to unionize the dairy farmers of Oregon, Washington and Idaho as part of his campaign to enroll an estimated 3,500,000 men in the dairy industry. To date approximately 30,000 dairymen have joined up with the United Mine Workers of America (U.M.W.), the membership being in New York and Michigan. The U.M.W. is Lewis' personal union and his reaching out for the dairymen is his first step in his plan to establish a third labor organization.

Four farm groups are prepared to fight the union scheme to the last ditch. The National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Council of Farmers Co-operatives, and the Free Farmers Inc. have been sharpening their knives for Lewis or any other labor leader who attempts to force the dairymen into a union. These farm associations opened up by presenting witnesses in favor of a house measure intended to curb labor racketeering. The U.M.W. organizers assert that there will be no violence in their efforts to get the dairymen into the tent; that there will be no coercion, no boycotting, no strikes or intimidation. These assurances have been taken with a grain of salt by the farm organizations.

Plans for building submarines on an assembly line were knocked into a cocked hat when the company received orders for another kind of production. The concern, located on the great lakes, was so interested in the Pacific northwest that one of the executives went out and studied the possibilities of Puget sound and the Columbia river. A site was spotted and plans drawn. There were to be four ways, or railroads. The boats were to be built in sections, the machinery installed at one point and the completed boat would slide into the river for a test. Each part of a submarine would be worked out by one crew; they built that part and no other, on the same principle as the assembly line in an automobile factory, where a workman turns out nut No. 48 on all cars.

More than 100 submarines are contracted in the new navy bill, which is yet to be acted on by house and senate. Possibly a part of them will be contracted for in the northwest.
