

ENGLISH LAUNCH "HALF A SHIP" TO MAKE A WHOLE NEW ONE—Novel technique was this of half a ship at an English port. The forepart of a 12,000-ton tanker after striking a mine. Afterpart was towed to port where this new forepart was built and launched for a drydock "fitting."

Grimes Perin Dies Here Thursday

Grimes Perin died in Eugene Thursday, May 21, at the age of 80. She was born in Kansas in 1862 and crossed the plains at the age of three, settling with her parents near Junction City. She married C. M. Grimes, who preceded her in death. They had two children, Grimes of Harrisburg, and Grimes Fay Grimes who died in 1914.

She later married John C. Perin May 14, 1922, and has lived in Eugene since. She was a member of the Harrisburg Methodist Church.

Writer Finds Sailor's Slang Has Undergone Streamlining

By JOE JAMES CUSTER
HONOLULU—(AP)—When I sailed with the Pacific fleet and heard an airdale telling a snipe that he was going to kick to the old man if that bean jockey didn't do a better job on the next batch of collision mats and mud, I realized the navy had streamlined its slang.

I was as ignorant as any boot of what the men were talking about but I soon learned that a doctor is really a doctor but that a doc is a pharmacist's mate, stamps is the mail clerk and that a signal man is a flag bag.

The word for coffee illustrates the changes in navy slang. The popular word once was jamoke. Then came just plain joe and then jock. Now the word is mud. Some of the words and their meanings:

Airdale—Aviation mate.
Snipe—Fireman.
Bean jockey—Cook.
Old man—Captain.
Collision mats—Pancakes.
Boot—Apprentice seaman.
Sea turkey—Salmon.
Seagull—Chicken.
Sea dust—Salt.

Plane Plant Rises From Cornfield

By REUEL S. MOORE
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(AP)—One of those Midwest cornfields where they plowed under the grain to raise a crop of fighting tools now is covered by the sprawling plant of the Allison division of General Motors corporation, turning out liquid-cooled motors for fighting planes faster than the plane manufacturers can use them.

In May, 1939, the site of the Allison works was a cornfield. Eleven months later, the plant had been developed to the point where it was able to keep workers going on three eight-hour shifts daily. It has been working at that pace ever since, turning out the motive power for the twin-motored Lockheed P-28 and the Bell Airacobra, two of the deadliest fighters in the skies.

Thousands of assembly line workers fit together parts contributed by 104 subcontractors in 60 cities.

"Our production is ahead of airplane manufacturers," said F. C. Kroeger, GMC vice-president and general manager of the Allison division. "We are building more engines in a day than we did in the year 1939; more engines in a month than we did in all 1940, and three times as many engines each month now as we did in the average month of 1941."

Kitson Springs Mentioned In 'Sunset'

Kitson hot mineral springs, long known to Lane county residents, has received national-wide publicity in the travel section of Sunset Magazine, the Eugene chamber of commerce was informed Tuesday. Excerpts from the article follow:

"The seeker of rest, beauty, health, and sport will do well to follow the road that leads from the Willamette highway in Oregon to Kitson hot mineral springs."

"David Kitson homesteaded and first developed the location, back in the Fifties, but he was not the first white man to bathe in the medicinal waters of the springs. Early Oregon immigrants had used what was then just a large mud-hole, for their baths, little realizing they were having for the taking what is rated by the government the third best medicinal hot mineral springs in the United States."
