Clifford Stalsberg and Robert Lemon, assisted by Laurence Moffitt, led a group of 18 into the Three Sister Primitive Area over the week-end.

Thirteen made the ascent to the top of the Middle Sister in four and one-half hours from Sunshine Shelter, including Clifford Stalsberg, Gordon Gullion, Don Beardsley, Pierre Van Ryselbergh, Robert H. Lemon, Ken and Agnes Shetterly, Charles Roffe, Jane Hall, Marvin Olson, Laurence Moffitt, and Jack McCracken. Two members, Reginald Macro and Bill Swarcutt, went to an elevation of 9000 feet and skied on Collier and Dillard glaciers. Marco thrilled the group by making a number of very difficult descensions of both Collier and Dillard glaciers. His descent on Dillard glacier was actually in the Eastern Oregon country.

Marjorie Scobert, Adeline Adams, and Charles Adams went into base camp at Sunshine and spent the day exploring various lakes and meadows at the base of the mountains.

The climb was made under ideal conditions and the group enjoyed many slides on the descent. Visibility was good, the group being able to pick out St. Helens, Hood, Jefferson, and Adams.

On July 23 and 26 the Obsidians are sponsoring a climb of the South Sister which will be led by Joe Heidenreich. The leader requests those interested sign up by Wednesday evening in order that prop-

Daughter Of Eugene People Holds Down Man's Job At Airfield

Rated as "typical of the machineries" who are now doing men's jobs at Paine field, Washington, is a former local girl, Hazel Brandt, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Brandt of Eugene.

Miss Brandt is among the first "girls in overalls" to arrive at Paine Field, to show that they can hold down men's jobs, and do the work that will relieve soldiers.

Says Hazel, who grew up on an 80-acre farm near Eugene, and who did do many little mechanical jobs at that time, "I guess I got the hang of machinery then."

Following her graduation from St. Mary's high school, and after the war broke out a few months later, Hazel wished to do something that would aid in the emergency. Girls were wanted at that time very badly to train for war work, and Hazel signed up.

Following a three-months basic training course as an electrician's helper, at Portland's Benson Polytechnic school, she was sent to Paine Field to start work.

'Hitler' Hung By Mailing Crew

"Hitler" was hung by the Register-Guard mailing room crew Monday.

Although it was only in effigy, it was an appropriate one. An oversize rat, corralled by the crew, was strung up in place of the nazi feather.

Laws on Operators' Licenses Are Cited

Al J. Peake, state examiner of operators and chauffeurs license, reported recently that more care in the use of operator's licenses should be taken, and the closer observance of the state law regarding the use of the license would make work much simpler both for the operator and the examiner.

The Oregon operators law states that all operators of vehicles in Oregon, even though they have the operator's license from another state, must have a valid Oregon license. To obtain the license, a test for vision and over the laws of this state must be given and passed, and satisfactory proof of driving ability shown by actual driving test.

A person wishing to obtain the chauffeur's license must not only have the operator's permit but must have passed, also, the additional test on laws concerning chauffeuring. Also, the persons wishing the latter must have passed the operator's test within the last 12 months.

"If additional information is wanted," Peake said, "persons may call at the city hall, room 9, and also get the new revised edition of the Oregon driver's manual there."

Defense Testimony Starts in Spy Case

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(P)—The military commission trying the eight German saboteurs who landed from U-boats announced late Monday that the prosecution had completed its case at 2:36 p. m. and that the defense was expected to start introducing its evidence tomorrow morning.

The life-or-death trial started July 8.

The late-day communique issued by Major General Frank R. McCoy, president of the commission, said that one hour and 54 minutes of the afternoon session was devoted "to arguments upon various motions made by the defense."

Holmer Observes Washington USO

A. F. Holmer, secretary for the Lane county citizens USO committee, has returned from an extended trip in Washington, where he consulted with local USO leaders from Seattle, Tacoma and other USO centers.

Mr. Holmer visited several USO operations in Seattle and spent considerable time observing the activities of the service men's center in Bellingham, Wash., where conditions closely parallel those that prevail in a community like Eugene, he reports.

In connection with his attendance at the annual school for YMCA executives at Seabeck, Wash., Mr. Holmer talked with other USO leaders and attended several sessions devoted to USO activities. Most YMCA local units are actively participating in services to the men in the armed forces.

Mr. Holmer expects to make a detailed report to the Lane county committee for the USO at a meeting to be convened soon by Chairman James A. Rodman.

On his return from the Washington conferences, Mr. Holmer attended a Portland meeting of the Oregon state committee on youth participation in Civilian Defense held last Thursday.

The local YMCA secretary, as the chairman of a sub-committee on plans and objectives, presented a report of the recommendations to be published and sent out to local county committees and to youth leaders throughout the state in time to be considered for youth activities during the fall and winter months. Dr. J. E. Richmond has been named chairman of the Lane county youth participation committee.

Oiling Under Way; Road Surface Broken

The county's road oiling crew will finish the Coburg north road this week and will then move to the Jasper-Fall Creek road, where six miles will be oiled. This road has never before been treated.

County Engineer P. M. Morse, County Commissioner Walter J. Holland and County Commissioner Fred Smigley went to Cottage Grove Monday afternoon to investigate a complaint that the contractors' trucks on the Cottage Grove dam in hauling rock for riprapping the dam reservoir are breaking up the oil surface of the road between the dam and Thorn bridge where the rock is quarried.
