Senators Down Athletics 7-5 in 1943 Major League Opene

HIGH CLIMBER

By DICK STRITE

Joe Gordon of the Yankees and Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox, both Oregonians, second-basemen and "clean-up" hitters, should have their best major-league seasons this year and stage another battle for the American league batting crown. Late last June, at the height of their campaigns, Joe was leading Bobby, .367 to .351, but pre-season tilts have not indicated the pending competition.

Gordon, in four games reported in the Sporting News, collected five hits, including two doubles, and two runs batted in for a .357 average. Doerr, on the other hand, failed to collect a hit in three games reported. . . . Joe handled 29 chances and Bobby 16 chances without error. . . .

The other local product now in the majors, Bill Sayles, pitched two hitless and scoreless innings as his New York Giants defeated the Red Sox, 4 to 0. . . . The big ex-Oregon righthander, who won 11 and lost 12 for Louisville in the American Association last year, is expected to stick with the National league club as long as Uncle Sam is willing.

A recent report from Los Angeles said that Elmer Mallory, the Junction City youngster who played short for Oregon before signing with the Angels of the Coast league, would be able to play at least half and possibly the entire season with Bill Sweeney's team . . . But Mallory, who is slated to enter the army air corps, wasn't in the lineup when the Angels defeated Oakland, 9 to 8 . . . Another familiar name was in the lineup, however. Wimpy Quinn, who played third base at Oregon and third and first for Vancouver in the Western International before moving to Los Angeles, played in the outfield for the Angels, hitting a home and a single. . . . The Chicago Cubs attempted to make a hurler out of him and the former Webfoot pitched and played the outfield in the Three-I league for seasons. . . . His appearance with the Angels was a mild surprise.

Local baseball fans will have an opportunity to see big-time baseballers in action on Howe field Friday afternoon when the University of Oregon Webfoots meet the Camp Adair Timber Wolves. The soldiers boast a fine club, sprinkled with players with organized baseball experience.

Most prominent among the visiting players will be John Henry "Jack" Knott and Roy Chester 'Beau" Bell.

Knott, the 37-year-old right-handed pitcher, has been in organized baseball for 20 years, the past 10 years in the major leagues —and was a member of the Philadelphia Athletics' pitching staff until entering the army. The former Southern Methodist collegian won only two and lost 10 for the A's last year, but the 6-foot-2, 200-pounder is a better twirler than the 1942 season records indicate. In 1939 he won 11 and lost 6 for the Chicago White Sox, and his best season was in 1934 when he won 10 and lost 3 for the St. Louis Browns . . . . In 1932 the 106 strikeouts while playing with switch hitter hung up a record of Milwaukee of the American Association.

Bell, an outfielder and first-baseman with the Browns, Tigers and Indians for five seasons, after six years in the minors, has a life-time batting average of .301, not counting last year's portion. The 25-year-old Texas A & formance with the Toledo Mud Hens of the American Associa-M graduate batted .344 and .340 for St. Louis in 1936 and 1937 and topped the American league in two-baggers in 1937 with 51. He bats and throws righthanded and will play first base for the Camp Adair team.

The Timber Wolves should give Hobby Hobson and his Webfoots, as well as the fans, an interesting afternoon.

Juel 'Jud Head" Faubion, the ex-Eugene high sprinter and football halfback, has been offered a baseball job with an Ogden, Utah semi-pro team. . . . Faubion was offered a contract a few years ago following a tryout at a northern California camp conducted by the Cincinnati Reds, but declined the bid, hoping to play baseball at the University of Oregon.

The Ogden deal is rather vague, but Ed Brauner, Faubion's old coach and Cincinnati scout, is under the impression that the circuit is a semi-pro league with the teams managed by former Pioneer league pilots and make up of the Pioneer leaguers still out of the service . . . . Mickey Shader, California representative for the Reds, offered Faubion the job at something like $200 per month.

Romy dePittard, halfback on the 1935 Oregon football team, was on the campus last week-end, wearing the single gold bar and wings of a second lieutenant in the army air corps. . . . Romy first entered the service as an RAF pilot and has two impressive rows of campaign ribbons after service in Burma and the south Pacific. . . .

Joe Miller, former Register-Guard sports writer, has accepted the post as city editor of the Lewiston Tribune . . . . He, and wife Rosalie, expect to leave the Oregon campus this week-end.

McNutt Throws Out First Ball

All Clubs Swing Into Action Wednesday

WASHINGTON, April 21—(U.P.)—War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt was the only pitcher who lasted out the game Tuesday as the Washington Senators exploded for six-runs in the sixth inning to score a 7-5 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics in the opening game of the major league season.

A crowd of 25,093 more or less chilled fans saw the game.

In the absence of President Roosevelt, who is on another war inspection tour, McNutt was called upon to toss out the first ball that sent the season on its way.

The silver-haired commissioner, once a hurler for the University of Indiana, carried out his assignment faultlessly—which was more than could be said for the Washington and Philadelphia pitching staffs.

Luman Harris, the A's right-hander was breezing along behind a 3-0 lead and seemed headed for a shutout victory when the roof suddenly caved in on him in the sixth. The hitherto handcuffed Senators broke loose with a surprising burst of concentrated hitting power that took its toll of Harris and two immediate successors. That was the ball game.

Leonard Gives Way

Before the game was over Washington added another run and Philadelphia added a fourth pitcher, but neither development was of any great consequence. Meanwhile, Washington had its pitching troubles, too, but only briefly.

The veteran Dutch Leonard started in quest of his first opening day victory in five seasons. He was still looking for it last night. The A's hopped on him for two runs in the third and another in the fourth. Dutch gave way to a pinch hitter in the fourth and Alex Carrasquel came in to finish the job with a masterful bit of relief hurling that earned him credit for the victory.

Russell Christopher who succeeded Harris and pitched to only two batters, was charged with the loss.

As it was, McNutt pitched the best ball.

His one pitch was a perfect strike that went into the waiting glove of Leonard who promptly pocketed the prized souvenir. Preceding the traditional first-ball tossing by McNutt was the flag-raising parade to centerfield led by senate democratic leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, American league president Will Harridge and Washington club owner Clark C. Griffith. Senate republican leader Charles McNary of Oregon watched the ceremonies from a box seat as did a dozen colleagues.

McNutt Hurls Strike

Then came McNutt's stint. First, he exposed his handsome profile to the cameramen, then went into a snappy overhead windup and tossed the strike that launched the 1943 season—one which McNutt predicted would see its way to the finish despite the exigencies of war and the draft.

About the game itself, Philadelphia nicked Leonard for two runs in the third on a single by Elmer Valo, doubles by Jo-Jo White and Jim Tyack and an outfield fly. Two walks, a sacrifice and a single by Valo added another in the third.

Then disaster befell the A's in the sixth and it was a former teammate—Bob Johnson — who started all the trouble. He opened with a sharp single to right center. Before it was over, Washington added four more base hits which, with two walks, a hit batsman and a fielder's choice, were good for six runs. Stan Spence delivered a two-run single to right-center with the bases loaded.

Harris, Christopher and Roger Wolff in turn sought to stem the attack, but in vain.

The A's countered with two in their half of the seventh on a walk, singles by Eddie Mayo and Tyack and Gerry Priddy's wild throw. Then Carrasquel turned on the heat and Philadelphia was helpless.

16 Clubs Play Today

Stripped of the gaudy trimmings of former years, major league baseball steps gingerly into the full opening program of its second war-time season today with a wideopen race forecast in both leagues.

Although a general air of trepidation pervaded the major leagues for months, it has been replaced with optimism since the virtual "green light" handed the sport by war manpower commissioner Paul V. McNutt and indications that pre-Pearl Harbor fathers will be available for almost the full 154-game schedule.

The New York Giants invade Ebbets field to play the Brooklyn Dodgers, Philadelphia plays at Boston, Pittsburgh goes to Chicago and St. Louis opens defense of its National league crown at Cincinnati.

In the American league, Washington, already victorious over the Philadelphia Athletics in their opening-day game at Griffith stadium, moves into Yankee stadium to play the 1942 champions, the New York Yankees; Chicago plays at St. Louis, Detroit at Cleveland and Boston at Philadelphia.

Penn Relays to Attract Large Field From Service Athletes

By BERNARD J. NILLES

PHILADELPHIA, April 21—(U.P.)—Track and field stars who have discarded their college colors for the red, white and blue of Uncle Sam's armed services are expected to make the 49th annual Penn Relay carnival one of the most sucessful in recent years.

Approximately 2500 athletes from the armed services, colleges, high schools and industrial plants will make a concerted attack on meet records in more than 60 events at Franklin Field Friday and Saturday, April 23-24.

H. Jamison Swarts, director of the carnival, believes the field will be one of the best in many years because of the large number of service performers who are expected to make the competition the hottest in history.

Relay officials announced the entry of Gregory Rice, crack two-miler who has not been defeated for three years, in a special race. He will be opposed by Colgate's I.C. 4-A indoor two-mile champion. Glenn Masten and other top-ranking collegiate distance runners. It will be Rice's first outdoor appearance of the season.

Two former college track stars, Pvt. Barney Ewell, of Camp Lee, formerly of Penn State, and Eulace Peacock, student at the Manhattan Coast Guard training school, are entered in the 100-yard sprint event. Cpl. Adam Berry, Fort Knox, who established a new carnival high-jump record last year with a leap of 6 feet, 7½ inches will be back again; Sgt. Lawrence J. Cohen, former Temple discus thrower, has sent in his entry from Altus Flying Field, Okla. Cornelius Warmerdam, the world's best pole vaulter, has been invited to compete in his specialty but Penn officials were pessimistic about his chances of obtaining leave from his naval pre-flight training.

In addition to individual entries, team entries have been filed by a half dozen service groups.

A United Nations half-mile relay race has been arranged with naval units representing the United States, England and French navies participating.

Boston Braves Adjust Piloting

BOSTON, April 21—(U.P.)—The Boston Braves will operate under the joint direction of coaches George Kelly and Bob Coleman during the absence of manager Casey Stengel, president Bob Quinn announced today.

Stengel was hospitalized with a broken leg yesterday when he was struck by an automobile.

The Braves meet the Philadelphia Phillies today.

Field Of Seven To Run In Derby Preview

LOUISVILLE, April 21—(U.P.)—A field of seven three-year-olds was named yesterday to run for the $10,000 Blue Grass Stakes, Kentucky's own derby preview, over a mile and one-furlong course at Churchill Downs tomorrow.

An anhual fixture at the Keeneland course, the Blue Grass will be run at Churchill this year because of the transfer of the Keeneland meeting there.

Heading the field are Calumet farm's Ocean Wave, Brown Hotel Stable's Seven Hearts and Dixiana Farm's Amber Light. Seven Hearts and Amber Light won the two winter classic three-year-old stakes—the $10,000 Arkansas derby and the $15,000 Louisiana derby —while Ocean Wave was second each time.

The others entered are Greentree stable's Noonday Sun, Dove Pie, Crest and Valdina Sol.

The University of Washington baseball team will leave for a four-game Oregon invasion Thursday and will face a real challenge for their position atop the northern division ladder.

Field conditions yesterday cancelled the second game of the Washington-Idaho series, while Oregon State kept a tight grip on the runner-up spot by turning back Washington State 8 to 6.

Washington will play Friday and Saturday at Corvallis and Monday and Tuesday against the University of Oregon at Eugene. Like Oregon State, the Webfoots have lost but one game, although they have played two less than the Beavers.

Oregon State at Corvallis yesterday concentrated their efforts in one big inning—the fourth—when the Beavers took advantage of two W. S. C. errors, coupled with a base on balls and five singles to score six runs. Single tallies were notched in the first and eighth innings.

Monday O. S. C. scored all its runs in one inning in winning 7-4.

Washington State pounded Andy Frahler for 14 hits, but Frahler kept them fairly well scattered.

'Old Pete' Alexander Watches Wistfully As Cardinals Play

CINCINNATI, O., April 21—(U.P.)—Grover Cleveland Alexander, a pitching immortal unsalvaged from baseball obscurity even by the war, sat in the stands today and watched wistfully as Cincinnati met the St. Louis Cardinals, the team he helped win the World Series in 1926.

"Old Pete," who hit the pinnacle of fame when he struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases filled in the New York-St. Louis World Series in 1926, had little illusion about his usefulness to baseball today.

"There's a little too much rubber in the old legs for me to dream about playing," he said. "But I'd like to have a go as coach with some team. I think I could teach these young pitchers a few things."

Organized Baseball Cements North-South American Relations

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK, April 21.—(U.P.)—Baseball—the game the Japs abandoned with sour-grape explanations—the game that provides the strongest bond of athletic unity among nations of North and South America—opened in eight major league cities of the United States today.

The baseball season was officially launched with a single game at Washington, D. C., yesterday under circumstances that should strengthen the ties of Pan-Americanism. The enthusiasm of Uncle Sam's citizens for today's general opening also should warn the Axis that the United States is taking the war in stride, even though that stride is mighty big.

Considering the Pan-American angles of the Washington opening, we note that (1) President Roosevelt was unable to throw out the first ball in traditional fashion because he was doing some important pitching down Mexico way; (2) Vice-President Wallace, likewise was unable to toss the initial pill because he is in South America, and (3) the Senators beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 7-5, aided by Senor Alejandro Carrasquel of Venezuela, who pitched the last five innings for Washington and was credited with the first mound victory of the 1943 campaign.

The value of major league baseball to the morale of civilian United States and as a listening-in diversion for our service men overseas often has been pointed out. But the importance of the diamond divertisement as a bond of mutual interest between the U.S.A. and our neighbors in Canada, and particularly in Latin America, too often is overlooked.

Most Latin-American countries are extremely baseball conscious. Millions of fans in Mexico, Puerto Rico, Cuba and the nations of South America follow the progress of our major league pennant races with the same enthusiasm as our home folks. And they play the game themselves so proficiently that thef have sprinkled our minor leagues with representatives, and even sent some of their stars up to the majors.

Right now there are five Latins in the majors: Carrasquel with Washington; Hiram Bithorn of Puerto Rico and Salvador Hernandez of Cuba with the Cubs; Roberto Estatella of Cuba with the Athletics, and Napoleon Reyes of Cuba with the Giants.

If we have another wartime major league season in 1944, we can expect to see many more Latin-Americans in the opening lineups.

District Track Meet Starts at 10 A. M.

Inclusion of Coos and Curry counties in the District 4 track and field meet here April 30, along with the usual entries from Lane and Douglas counties, will make necessary the staging of preliminaries at 10 a. m. the morning of the meet, according to Fritz Kramer of Eugene high, director of the district meet.

Runners, jumpers and tossers from North Bend, Marshfield, Coquille and other coast schools will make the district meet one of the strongest in the state. Winners will qualify for the state championships to be held here the following week-end, May 7.

Kramer said that preliminaries will be necessary in every event except the 880-yard and the mile runs. Medical blanks must accompany all individual entries, Kramer said.

Pierre LaBelle to Vie Again Saturday

Pierre LaBelle, the popular Frenchman who is virtually pounding on Pacific coast light-heavyweight door, will appear in the semi-final attraction of Matchmaker Don Owen's weekly wrestling show at the Pearl Street arena Saturday night.

LaBelle has amassed an eviable record in his three previous appearances here—triumphs over Billy McEuin, Bulldog Jackson and Tex Hager. Apparently there is no stopping the Frenchman until he is matched against Champion Jack Lipscomb, and possibly not then. Owen said Wednesday that he was attempting to sign LaBelle against another outstanding title contender and offer a title tilt to the winner. LaBelle's opponent has not been found to date.

In the meantime Lane county grappling fans were staging long and heated arguments regarding the probable outcome of the mixed boxing-wrestling match between Lipscomb and Elton Owen. The local referee will be the boxer, using six-ounce gloves, and Lipscomb will be the wrestler.

"Under ordinary circumstances a wrestler has a great advantage over a boxer," Owen said, "but I believe I know enough wrestling to keep out of the clutches of Lipscomb. One thing is certain, and that is I'm going after a quick knockout."

The headline attraction of Saturday's performance will be over a 10-round route, with each round of three-minutes duration. The rules call for Owen to score a knockout (Lipscomb counted out the necessary 10 seconds) or for Lipscomb to score two falls (pin Owen's shoulders to the mat for three-second counts) to register victories.

The local matchmaker, who expects another capacity attendance, said he would announce LaBelle's opponent not later than tomorrow.

TCU Coach Must Teach 40 to Insure 11 Men On Grid Team Next Fall

"We've got to have boys who can plug a hole on short nottice," comments Coach Meyer.
