Government Takes All Mint Output
Lane county growers and distillers of peppermint will dispose of their mint oil this year to the war food administration, according to a press dispatch from Portland. The food administration will take all existing supplies of the oil in Oregon and Washington from approximately 8000 acres of mint grown in the two states. No data on the acreage in Lane county is obtainable at the present time but there are several hundred acres of the crop this year and several distilleries are in operation.
The stoppage of all sales by the government was ordered "without regard to the rights of creditors, existing contracts or payments made." The effective date of Sept. 13 required 100 per cent delivery to the federal agency, and a report of all amount in excess of 25 pounds. The oil has a present market value of about $5 a pound and is used principally for flavoring and medicine. Columbia, Marion and Lane counties are the biggest producers in Oregon while the lower Columbia region and the Kennewick region in Washington are the best areas there. The 1943 crop is about 70 per cent as heavy as the 1942 yield.
