COMMENTATORS' WINGS CLIPPED

In the last week or two there has been a big fuss because the Columbia network has ordered some of the biggest name commentators to cut out opinion and stick to news.

Bob Ruhl in The Medford Tribune (who evidently does not think some of the shots are so big) suggests a very simple remedy for this trouble—separate news and opinion, just as newspapers have done for a long long time.

In a newspaper, if you see it in the editorial columns you know it is opinion. If you see it in the news pages, it may be presumed to be factual report.

In radio it may not be so easy to tag the two departments, but it would be helpful to announce a news reporter as a news reporter and a commentator as "a sounder off."

However, there is an unexplored phase of this matter that has not been mentioned: How far is this effort to squelch the commentators due to government pressures through FCC?

Not long ago it was brought out at a congressional hearing that certain officials in FCC has used some rather high-handed methods to compel radio operators to discharge certain persons not to official liking.

But it is only a step from government encroachment in little things to control of all things, and the authority of FCC over radio is that of life or death.

Many of the radio commentators—and newspaper columnists—have outgrown their hats these last few years. Fame and money have spoiled some good reporters and observers.

But—the remedy is NOT suppression, least of all suppression by political agencies. Time marches on—and over—such swell headed gents.

If the draft reaches further into the government forces, those fellows will be sitting on Germans instead of chairs.

When you don't think much of someone it's irritating to think too much of them.

England will be glad to hear that the Yanks are coming again—six of 'em with the touring big league baseballers.

You can yodel the answer to four more points being added to butter. O-le-o!

England Plans Tree Farms... The drain of war on our forests has given the calamity howler another great day, and he is making the most of it in these parts.

In World War I, 450,000 acres of Britain's forests were cut over. Even more acreage is being cut in the present war. The forest picture on the small island is indeed one to cry calamity about.

Great Britain has six million acres of forest land, about one-fourth of the commercial forest area of the Douglas fir region. Half of the acreage is deforested. Another two million acres needs "development."

In the end of her two brown braids, red ribbon bows were gay butterflies. Her high-top button shoes were squeaky new.

She was afraid of the Big Boys, some of whom were much larger than Teacher. Teacher was a young lady of seventeen; not old like Mother who was twenty-four.

The smaller children waited respectfully in line while the Big Boys drank from the dipper at the bucket on the bench in the hall. What water was left after each drinking was thriftily tossed back in the bucket.

She had a little slate bound with red felt. A sponge was attached to it with a string. The Big Boys thought a sponge sissified. They spit on their slates and rubbed with their elbows.

to air fields, and its towns into billets for the increasing forces of invasion. Yet its people and its government are prepared and ready to move into action on a studied, detailed 50-year plan for turning the country's bare hills into tree farms and making existing forests immensely more productive.

What do we have here to match that? In the way of forest land we have in the Douglas fir region over ten million acres of old-growth timber, more than three million acres of second-growth saw timber, and eight million acres of surveyed second-growth of less than saw timber size.

What is lacking is strong popular demand for forest planning on the British pattern, and strong popular support of the projects of both private and public forestry here. It is time for the people of these parts to get tree-happy.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By JAMES THRASHER, NEA Staff Correspondent

MARSHALL RUMORS ARE SPIKED... PASS the opium, Pappy, and let's have a look at the general situation. What general situation? Why, the general situation as regards generals, but naturally.

Let's see now, how do we stand? Gen. George C. Marshall is going to be removed as chief of staff and rendered completely powerless by being given command of all American and British forces.

With General Marshall thus shackled and shoved into an obscure corner, Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell will be made chief of staff and put to work reorganizing the War Department along global and political lines.

General Somervell will fire the five major generals who are chiefs of the quartermaster, engineer and transportation corps, the Ordnance Department, and the Chemical Warfare Service.

Well, there you have it. Bit confusing, isn't it? But that is the general situation as set forth by Rep. Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich.) in a speech printed in the Congressional Record and later amplified by statements to a reporter and duly published.

It all started with the recent hue and cry about General Marshall being "kicked upstairs" by Mr. Churchill and under the White House "palace guard" and/or somebody else.

The hue and cry is a little amazing in the first place, since the rumor of General Marshall's overseas transfer has been heard around Washington for six months, and was never considered as anything but a richly deserved promotion.

Not only did Mr. Churchill spike that in his recent speech to Commons, but he had General Marshall to accompany him and Anthony Eden to Africa (where they conferred with General Eisenhower) and to England, after the last Washington conference. Seems a queer way to deal with a general whose strategy you distrust and disagree with.

As for General Somervell, the villainous role assigned him by Representative Shafer is only the latest of at least three that he has been given recently. When he was WPA director in New York he was accused of Communist leanings.

Some of the five major generals whom General Somervell is supposed to fire, if Representative Shafer doesn't avert his appointment as chief of staff, are General Somervell's own choices. All have worked with and under him in ASF and, judging from the course of the war, have done a pretty good job.

Representative Shafer bases all his charges on a "blueprint of a plan which presumably would streamline the War Department, but in reality... convert that great department into a New Deal political organization."

It's no secret that a streamlining plan is in the offing, and has been worked on for some time. It has been talked about at the recent meeting of the Women of Moose, as Mrs. Steve Brown was given initiation as a member of the Women of Moose, at the recent meeting of the women's lodge.

Auxiliary to the Typographical union met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. B. Hill. Discussion of future entertainment plans was held during the business session. The hostess served refreshments. Miss Cora Kreamer will be the next hostess.

First Citizens' banquet to be held in January will be made by members of the Eugene Realty Board at their regular luncheon meeting Thursday noon, Wills cafe. For the duration, this event honors all men and women in the armed forces.

The war fund and community chest urban survey committee named by the board also will give its report Thursday. On this committee are Frank Cashman, F. M. Bennett, R. A. McCully, W. R. Robertson, J. A. Plummer, Robert W. Prescott, P. Aug. Peterson, R. N. Stevenson, M. Wilhelm, John Mencke, and C. S. Benjamin.

Representative Shafer told the press that among those being considered as replacements for these five men are Dr. Ell Ginzberg and James P. Mitchell. He said he "understood" that both these civilians are graduates of Harvard Law School in the days when Justice Frankfurter taught there.

The fact is that Dr. Ginzberg never went to Harvard, and Mitchell has no college degree of any sort. The latter is director of industrial personnel (civilian) in the ASF, while Dr. Ginzberg is a statistical clerk in the ASF control division.

Recipe

(By NEA Service) AMERICANS like their sweets. Deprived of them too often, they lose some of their fighting morale. But nutritionists are urging that all sweets, such as candy, desserts and sweet sauces carry also some nutrients.

The home-maker can combine nutritious food elements in her desserts, cakes and sauces too, such as eggs, nuts, enriched flour. Make it a rule to serve no sweet without some good nutrition in it.

One-quarter cup shortening, 1/4 cup brown sugar, 1 egg, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract, 2 table-spoons milk, 1/2 cup flour, sifted, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon baking powder, 1-3 cup broken walnuts or peanuts, 1 tablespoon confectioner's sugar.

Beat shortening and sugar together until light and fluffy, add egg and vanilla and beat thoroughly. Add milk. Sift flour, salt and baking powder together. Add to the cake mixture and beat very thoroughly. Add the walnuts or peanuts, pour the batter into a well-greased one-quart heat-resistant glass utility dish.

Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes. Cut into strips and sprinkle with confectioner's sugar. These are especially delicious warm.

One cup molasses, 2 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine, juice of 2 lemons. Mix molasses and butter or margarine together and bring to a boil. Add lemon juice. Serve warm on French toast, griddle cakes, fried mush or hominy, or use as a sauce over puddings.

Three-quarters cup brown sugar, 1 tablespoon all-purpose enriched flour, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 table-spoon butter or fortified margarine, 1 1/2 cups water, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Blend flour and cornstarch with the brown sugar and salt. To avoid lumping, stir in water slowly. Cook 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add butter or margarine and vanilla.
