Alumni servicemen and women will be honored at this year's token observation of the University of Oregon's annual homecoming, according to the alumni office. The traditional event, to take place January 15, will be much less elaborate than in former years and will feature a special tribute to alumni now in the service and plans for the post-war period.

The program is being arranged by the campus war board and the rally squad. Alumni servicemen who are on the campus for this year's homecoming will be special guests of the university alumni association.

The annual meeting of the alumni meeting and the nomination of new officers will take place in conjunction with homecoming week-end. Plans for alumni activities during and after the war will be discussed at this meeting.
