New York Markets

By GARETH MUCHMORE

NEW YORK, June 21—(AP)—Stock market leaders backed down reluctantly today under continued profit cashing, although selected issues managed occasional advances and liquor shares attracted considerable support.

Distillery stocks were in demand at the fast opening, benefiting from the decision of the war production board to permit a temporary resumption of the manufacture of beverage alcohol. They ran into flurries of liquidation later, but clung to some of their gains toward the close. Turnover amounted to about 1,500,000 shares.

Resistant to selling, and occasionally in the plus column, were National Distillers, Distillers Corp., American Distilling, Hiram Walker, International Nickel, and Hupp Motor. National Biscuit also attracted buyers.

The long list of stumblers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Packard, Westinghouse, Paramount, International Telephone, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Illinois Central, Phillips Petroleum and Park & Tilford, which lost heavily at times.

St. Regis Paper leaned forward in a mixed curb, while Cities Service and Cuban Atlantic Sugar slipped.

Bonds were irregularly lower.

OPA Seeks Cost Cuts In South Lane Areas

Price control in Cottage Grove will be supervised in the future by the Eugene office, according to word from the district OPA office in Portland.

First meeting under the new arrangement was held Tuesday afternoon at the Cottage Grove city hall, with members of the Eugene board staff and Creswell retail grocers in attendance. An open discussion on price control and compliance was held.

Efforts will be made to cut living costs in the Cottage Grove-Creswell area, the Eugene board said.

'Old Spaghetti' to Truck Job in China

By WALTER G. RUNDLE
United Press War Correspondent

AT A NEW AMERICAN SUPER-AIRBASE IN WESTERN CHINA, June 19—(UP)—"Old Spaghetti," veteran of the fighting in north Africa, Sicily and Salerno, is on her way to the remote wilds of western China to take up where she left off when the men who service the Superfortresses—the B-29's—were ordered to the other side of the world.

Bits of this and bits of that make up "Old Spaghetti." She joined an airforce outfit in Africa when Col. Paul A. Cunyus, of Longview, Tex., found his men trying to service 52 troop-carrying planes with but one truck. The outfit had reached Africa ahead of its supplies and there were no other trucks to be found.

"Then one day," the colonel related, "Tech Sergeant William R. Zarko, a former Trenton, N. J., racing driver, found a British junk heap near Moascar, in the delta region.

Heap Yields Truck

"He poked through the heap and among the hulks of burned-out tanks, wrecked planes and among the odds and ends of shot up motor equipment he spotted a battered, shell-scarred Italian truck. Zarka kidded the British sergeant in charge until finally he was told he could have the wreck if he could drive it away.

"Sarka, a crackerjack mechanic, tinkered with the wreck for two hours and then drove it away.

"The boys at the base promptly called her the 'Spaghetti Wagon,' and started gathering parts for her. She was fitted out with German tires, another Italian motor, fenders from a wrecked British truck, and other parts they found on the desert. And 'Old Spaghetti' began to look a little more respectable. What's more, she ran like a top.

Spaghetti Not Outdated

"By the time the first orders to move on came through, we had maybe eight or 10 more trucks, most of them better looking than 'Old Spaghetti', although their origins were the same. Some of the men wanted to ditch our veteran. But Zarka and Maj. William W. Wilson, of Columbus, O., decided to give her a crucial test in convoy.

"'Old Spaghetti' led the convoy in.

"That established her. And when orders came to move on to Tobruk, she was given the place of honor at the head of the column. She proved herself again, giving less trouble than any other vehicle in the convoy.

"Our salvaged equipment was growing and we moved on to Bengasi, Tripoli, Tunis—a rag-tag convoy of 91 vehicles, German, Italian and nondescript, with 'Old Spaghetti' always in the lead and acting like a lady. The first question everyone asked after each move was, 'did Old Spaghetti make it?' and she always did.

Always On The Go

"We took her to Italy when we moved in there with the 57th and 79th fighter groups, although her ungainly frame almost wrecked a British LST in the process of loading. In more than a year 'Old Spaghetti' never missed a single day's operation. The men came to regard her as a symbol. As long as she was perking everything was all right.

"When our orders came through to move from Italy to these B-29 bases in China, it nearly broke the hearts of the men because they thought they might have to leave 'Old Spaghetti' behind. But instructions were left to load her with our equipment and send her along.

"We're sweating it out now, waiting to see if she really shows up. But if there's any way to get her here boy, we'll do it."

MSgt. Frank R. Dietz, Wilkes-barre, Pa., added that the outfit "will get 'Old Spaghetti' up the Burma road and into China somehow."

Klamath Falls Votes Post-war Reserves

KLAMATH FALLS—(AP)—Voters of the Klamath Falls elementary school district and the Klamath county unit district Tuesday overwhelmingly approved measures to create financial reserves for post-war property construction and rehabilitation.

The city district board was authorized to levy $20,000 annually for five years, and the county board to levy $60,000 annually for five years.
