Health Authorities Ask Clean-up Here To Prevent Polio

Request is again being made by the Lane county health department to citizens of the county to burn or remove to approved dump grounds all garbage and waste material exposed to flies, mosquitoes and rats, calling attention to the necessity of taking precautionary measures to prevent the recurrence of a polio epidemic. In a letter directed to the people of the county, the health department says: "In a recent survey of populated areas, in and adjacent to incorporated cities and towns, it was found that many dumps or piles of garbage, trash, cans, and waste material existed, in which flies, rats and mosquitoes were breeding. As this is the time of year for polio and due to the number of cases of this disease reported last year and those anticipated by health authorities for this year, all precautionary measures should be taken to prevent this dreadful disease from getting started here again. "To date, Lane county has been spared the number of cases we had last year at this time. Elimination of these small backyard dumps and the pests, may prove to be the severance in the chain of the transmission of polio from a reservoir to a host or a well person." After graduating from St. Mary's high school, Beaverton, Father Sohler took his seminary training at St. Joseph's College, Mountain View, Calif., St. Patrick's Seminary, Menlo Park, Calif., and then became a member of the first ordination class to be graduated from St. Edward's seminary, Seattle. Rev. Albert Rodakowski, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rodakowski, Springfield, will succeed Father Sohler as the new assistant in Eugene. Father Rodakowski is a graduate of St. Mary's high school, Eugene. He was ordained June 3, 1944, and offered his first solemn mass in St. Mary's church, Eugene.
