Weather Slows Italy Fighting

ROME, Oct. 11.—(AP)—American troops, still slowed by rain and deep mud, have reached the southern outskirts of Livorno, 11 miles due south of Bologna on highway 65, and advance elements there are meeting fierce German counterattacks, it was announced today.

The pace of the fighting along the entire Italian battlefield generally was reported retarded by adverse weather.

After several days of bloody fighting British troops of the 8th army shot the Germans off Mount Cece and took possession of the little knob of ground. The British also managed to put troops on Mount Freddo, where the Germans had reacted violently for days to any attempt to advance.

American troops moved into Gesso in the hills 11 miles southwest of Imola and clung to it despite a German counterattack. Another hill and the villages of Magarolo and Campagne east of highway 65 also were seized by the Americans.

West of the highway, too, the Germans were fighting for every mud puddle, but some progress was made in the drive for Bologna and advance elements were approaching Vado, 12 miles to the southwest. South African troops were reported locked in bitter fighting on Mount Stanco, just west of Grizzana on the American left.

The 8th army appeared to be making some progress in the hills of the Adriatic front despite almost constant rain. British and Indian troops reached the summit of a new ridge extending from Monigallo to Mount Farneto, northwest of San Marino, and threw the Germans out of a few houses they attempted to hold in the villages of Roncofreddo and San Paolo.

Heavy fighting continued a mile east of Longiano.

Air operations again were restricted by the weather, but there was some activity against rail, bridge and gun targets by fighters and fighter bombers.

Girls More Unsure Of Future, Shown

That girls are more uncertain of their future now than before the war appears evident from the fact that they seek the aid of the personnel research bureau at the university in increasing numbers, Dr. Leona Tyler, head of the bureau, reports.

One function of the bureau is vocational counseling. Dr. Tyler says. Tests for special abilities, interests and personality characteristics are given, for a small fee, from which may be worked out the fields of study or endeavor a student is best suited for.

Ninety-three cases were handled by the bureau last year, an increase of 31 over the year before, according to Dr. Tyler. Prior to the war around 100 cases a year, almost all boys, were taken care of.

Students who have graduated have sometimes been helped in obtaining positions, Dr. Tyler says, by having the results of their vocational tests sent to employers.

Though created for students, outside cases are occasionally handled by the bureau. Interviews may be arranged during Dr. Tyler's office hours: Mondays from 9 to 12; Fridays from 1:30 to 4:30.

McMinnville Studies Plan For Expansion

McMINNVILLE, Oct. 11.—(AP)—A civic committee here is studying a plan to expand McMinnville's city limits to take in several thousand suburban residents and boost the population to a total of 10,000 or 15,000.

The plan ties in with a proposed new city hall, which voters would be asked to authorize through a bond issue. The city council has an option on a site for the building.
