Greek Patriots Liberate Athens

CAIRO, Oct. 13.—(U.P.)—A re-surgent army of patriots has liberated Athens, it was announced officially today, ending a 42-month Nazi occupation of the ancient Greek capital and foreshadowing the imminent allied occupation of all Greece and the eastern Mediterranean islands.

German troops who marched triumphantly into Athens on April 27, 1941, after crushing a tiny Greek army and an outnumbered British expeditionary force in 21 days, abandoned the city and its neighboring seaport of Piraeus. They fled northward under savage attack by planes of a British carrier force standing offshore in the western Aegean.

First official account of the liberation of Athens, the seventh allied capital wrested from the German grip since the start of the Anglo-American and soviet summer campaigns, gave no details of the partisan attack.

It was indicated, however, that the main German garrison had been withdrawn from Athens and Piraeus several days ago, sparking a patriot uprising that swiftly overwhelmed the weak enemy rear guard left to cover the retreat.

An allied communique issued in Rome several hours earlier revealed that low-flying British warplanes, launched from escort carriers, bombed and strafed two large concentrations of German shipping concentrated near the port of Khaliks.

The British destroyed many small boats, which apparently were trying to make a run along the coast to Salonika with troops and equipment evacuated from Athens.

torch-lights and scores of big banners and signs—rivalling a stampede show at a national political convention.

Both Bricker and his wife responded to the welcome to give talks in greeting, Bricker urging the students to keep alive an interest in the political and governmental life of the country. He spoke of the future responsibilities ahead for students of today and said "America is limited in its opportunities only by the spirit and integrity of its people."

As he stepped back inside the car from the platform, Bricker waved his hand time and time again as he boomed out: "Wasn't that a grand group of youngsters—wasn't that a show to thrill you?"

At Court

Traveling press folk commented on the reception accorded by the students and said it was the best show yet, the needed touch of enthusiasm.

Adhering to his policy throughout the campaign tour of backing all state republican candidates, Bricker told the students he expected to see in Washington next January their former professor Wayne L. Morse, republican nominee for the six-year term in the United States senate. Morse was on the platform when Bricker spoke.

At McArthur court, Morse, Senator Guy Cordon, Rep. Harris Ellsworth of the fourth congressional district, as well as Congressman James W. Mott from the first district; State Treasurer Leslie M. Scott, Secretary of State Robert S. Farrell, Jr.; Ralph H. Cake, republican national committeeman from Oregon; Mrs. George T. Gerlinger, republican national committeewoman; Niel R. Allen, state republican chairman; Mrs. John Y. Richardson, state republican vice-chairman, and others were introduced, also county candidates, just preceding Bricker's arrival at the court.

Ellsworth, Cordon, and Morse were spotted for three-minute talks each just ahead of Bricker taking over. Ralph H. Cake introduced Bricker, James A. Rodman, Sr., Lane county republican committee chairman, presided, and Tommy Luke of Portland led community singing.

Following the address, the Brickers were greeted by hundreds who swarmed about them to shake hands, the couple again demonstrating their ability "to take it" from crowds.

It's the buttons that give this classic its bloom of glory, and it's hip tucking that makes its flattery tick. A wonder of a dress that's wearable the whole year round... and beautiful every second you wear it.

The nominee declared "I shall fight to the end to see that rights of Americans to vote are protected."

That America has to protect her trade, commensurate with the needs wherever her territorial and trade responsibilities are, was another point of interest made by Governor Bricker when asked about his previous day's speech in which he spoke of "a strong system of outlying military bases within the sphere of American responsibility for world security."

He explained he did not mean that America should possess bases in every ocean, but should have them where needed and from where our trade could be protected.

Bricker said further that when we take over a responsibility as we did in the Philippines we must not leave it to the mercy of ruthless countries—and he emphasized that by that statement he certainly was not advocating any imperialism on the part of the United States.

"Champion greeter of people"—that's one sideline observation of Ohio's governor. He certainly can handle a crush of people easily. Both he and Mrs. Bricker drifted through the special train from time to time to greet those getting on at each stop, or to chat again with regular travelers on the special.

By the time Salem was reached, the Brickers had pretty well made the rounds in greeting the 25 or more who went aboard at Portland. Soon after Salem and Eugene folk got on the train at the state capital the Brickers were about, greeting the newcomers in time to clear the decks for the governor to give his platform talk at Albany, then eat dinner in time to take on the rally and meeting at Eugene.

Governor Bricker was very interested in the program of the making of ethyl alcohol from wood waste materials in this section, and by his remarks revealed he knew something of what is going on in Lane county.

Joining the train at Salem to come on to Eugene were Congressman James W. Mott, first congressional district; C. A. Lewis, Marion county central committee chairman; Mrs. Doris Woodburn, Marion county vice-chairman; John Carkin, State Treasurer Leslie M. Scott, and Secretary of State Robert S. Farrell, Jr.

FDR Orders More Farm Machinery

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt directed WPB chairman J. A. Krug today to step up the production of farm machinery so that the United States can continue its record high food production into the post-war period.

"War-time experience has demonstrated that a fully employed American will consume food in quantities substantially in excess of the prewar period," the president told Krug in a letter made public at today's news conference.

"Our plans call for maintaining full employment at home. The consumption of food at home, and hence the production of food for consumption at home, must remain at high levels to satisfy the needs and demands of a fully employed America."

In addition to domestic needs, the president said the United States will have vast food exports after the war, both through UNRRA for liberated countries and through commercial channels of foreign trade.

Release Of Water From Dams Starts

There's going to be more water in the coast fork of the Willamette and in the Long Tom river in the very near future.

U. S. army engineers announced that release of water from the Cottage Grove dam reservoir began Friday. Withdrawal from the Fern Ridge reservoir will commence next Wednesday.

The release of water will raise the coast fork about five and one half feet immediately below the dam, four feet at Goshen and about two feet in Eugene at the Ferry street bridge.

Maximum rise will develop at Eugene Sunday night. By Monday afternoon it will have receded some, army engineers said. After that the river at that point will remain at about a one-foot rise until withdrawal is completed. The maximum withdrawal will be at the rate of about 4,000 acre feet daily.

The first effects of the Fern Ridge withdrawal will be observed about Oct. 26, the engineers said. From six miles below Monroe to Hoakum island low land will be inundated. From the reservoir to a point three miles below Monroe there is a new channel. Maximum withdrawal from Fern Ridge reservoir will be at the rate of approximately 4000 acre feet a day.

The withdrawal is scheduled to be completed at both reservoirs by Nov. 1, to prepare them to receive storm water. A minimum pool covering 600 to 700 acres will be retained in the Cottage Grove
